Barrier Stormed Twice; Japanese Repulsed With 1,000 Lost.

General Escapes With U. S. Airman

Chinese Rear Guards Harass Foe as Main Army Retreats.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Nanking (Wednesday), Dec. 8.—Japanese artillery today was reported to be bombarding the northwest gates of this walled capital in an effort to make a breach through which tanks and infantry could enter.

Parts of the city were in flames shortly after midnight.

Reports reached the United States gunboat Panay, on which most Americans were in refuge, that the Japanese were executing a flanking movement which had brought them to the northwest gate, designed to cut off the retreat of remaining Chinese forces in and around the city.

[Chinese sources reported Japanese columns storming two gateways were repulsed with 1,000 casualties, the Associated Press said—Efiditor's note.]

Countryside in Flames.

Reports up to midnight indicated the Chinese still were maintaining a ferry service across the Yangtze River from the Kiangpien station to the railway head in Pukow—Nanking's sister city.

Much of the countryside around Nanking was in flames as retreating Chinese burned peasant homes, grain stacks and buildings.

It was reported reliably that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Mme. Chiang and their closest advisers had fled Nanking in an airplane for Nanchang or Hankow. (Julius Barr, an American, has been acting as the generalissimo's personal pilot.)

Japanese planes were bombing at will the all but deserted capital, from which the Chinese civilian government was evacuated last month to Hankow, Chungking and other cities.

Anti-Aircraft Guns Ineffective.

Chinese still were operating anti-aircraft batteries, but with little success.

It was indicated considerable stores of munitions and guns would fall into Japanese hands when the capital is occupied, though some reports said they were being destroyed.

The last remaining officials of the United States Embassy were expected to board the Panay at any moment. The embassy has been in charge of Secretaries J. Paxton Hall and George Acheson, jr., since Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson and most of his staff moved to Hankow on the U. S. S. Luzon.

The U. S. S. Guam, another gunboat of the Yangtze River patrol, was due in Wuhu, just above Nanking, today from Kiukiang. She is picking up Americans in various river ports.

For all practical purposes, military attaches said, Nanking already has been captured, since the Chinese have lost all the strategic points which would make possible effective resistance.

Chinese forces, earlier estimated to total more than 300,000, retreated into the walled city area all day yesterday, leaving only rear guard detachments to impede the Japanese advance.

Mellon Cleared In $3,000,000 Tax Fraud Suit

Financier Posthumously Exonerated; Claims Cut to $700,000.

Three months after the death of its principal figure, the $3,000,000 suit brought against former Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon was settled yesterday in Mellon's favor.

The 125-page decision, representing a year's work, was handed down by the United States Board of Tax Appeals, exonerated the late Pittsburgh financier of income tax fraud.

Government claims against Mellon's estate were cut from $3,075,103 to about $700,000. The board was unanimous in its rejection of fraud charges, but was divided on other issues.

The crux of the dispute, which was begun three years ago and was based on Mellon's 1931 tax return, was his Educational and Charitable Trust, to which he turned over his $50,000,000 art collection. The board unanimously approved the organization as "a valid existing trust.

Harrison Tax Talk Derided By Doughton

Ways and Means Leader Calls Senator's 'Pie' Story a Myth.

House Chief Declares for Revision But Warns Against Excess.

By Robert C. Albright.

A slight disagreement over figures and some verbal pie slinging yesterday enlivened traditional differences between House and Senate on the prosaic subject of taxes.

Principals were rugged Representative Robert L. Doughton, of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, soft-spoken Senate Finance Committee chairman.

Pie thrown was "profits pie," not custard. Doughton hurled it, by word of mouth, in a statement prepared for the National Association of Tax Administrators now meeting in Atlantic City.

Doughton "Lets Fly."

When the pie was opened, Harrison's name wasn't mentioned but he was in it. A week ago, in a radio speech, Harrison told a story about "profits pie" and how the capital gains taxpayer in some cases kept only one slice for himself for every nine he paid out in taxes.

Doughton yesterday called it a "pie' myth." He redivided the pie the way he said it should be divided, and let fly. Then he took a good, healthy swing at the Senate for changes it made last session in the House undivided profits tax bill. In a word, he blamed the Senate for many of the inequities in the unpopular corporate profits levy.

Harrison in his speech had conceded a tax "mistake" for which many people were responsible. He had intimated the Senate committee would go just as far as the House group in modifying the undivided profits tax and might even go farther in capital gains revision.

Story Called "Fantasy."

Doughton in his statement referred to remarks made "over the radio" about the Government taking 90 per cent of the gain from sale of a capital asset.

"The case has been dramatized by

Cold Wave Strikes South; Capital Due To Get Snow Today

As winter chilled the South yesterday, causing at least five deaths and menacing fruit and vegetable crops worth millions of dollars, Washington shivered in the throes of the coldest wave of the season, with the temperature shrunk to 24.5 degrees at midnight.

The forecaster said snow probably would fly in the District this afternoon.

Frost reached as far South as the Everglades of Florida, with Louisiana farmers fearing the sugar cane crop would suffer. Northern New York was snowbound, and shipping was threatened from the Virginia Capes to Portland, Me.

Cloudy and slightly warmer was the prediction for Washington and its environs today.

Plot to Hold Up Brother Bared By Finger Man

Helped Gang Rob Kin of $6,000 Before, Police Say He Admits.

Detective Sergt. Joseph Shimon said last night Paul J. Nelson, brother of Charles Nelson, wealthy Prince Georges County man whose safe was to have been robbed Sunday night by the Williams gang, confessed after a three-hour grilling that he was the "finger man" in the attempted robbery.

Nelson was surrendered last night by his attorney to Detective Sergts. Frank Brass and J. K. Baker and was lodged for investigation in Twelfth Precinct station.

Carleton G. (Cotty) Williams, 30, was killed in a police ambush Sunday night when an alleged attempt to rob Charles Nelson's safe in a house at Thirty-eighth street and Suitland road southeast was frustrated. Marshall Tabler, 30, surrendered yesterday to "avoid being shot," he said, and a colored man has been held since Monday.

Paul Nelson, Shimon said, also confessed he "fingered" a robbery several months ago when his brother was robbed of $6,000 by the Williams gang in Arlington County, Va.

Police said also they were looking for another man, who was arrested with Williams some time ago and is under $10,000 bond.

Tabler refused to answer questions, although he was grilled for two hours. He was free on $10,000 bond pending trial on a charge of assault with intent to kill. He is alleged to have "taken for a ride" a colored witness scheduled to testify against him in a liquor conspiracy case. Yesterday Tabler was denied bond and locked up without charges.

Cotton Quota Kept in Farm Bill, 80 to 59

House Rejects Amendment, Also Refuses to Move Up Program.

Senate Crushes Effort to Make the Plan a Temporary One.

Administration leaders rallied in House and Senate yesterday to halt at least temporarily the farm bill opposition raids that had cut wheat marketing control from the House measure and had threatened recommittal of the Senate bill.

By a 59-to-80 standing vote, the House defeated an amendment aimed at elimination of the cotton marketing quota system. Earlier, members stood by Chairman Marvin Jones to prevent application of cotton quotas to next year's crop, a year ahead of the bill's schedule.

In the Senate, an amendment by Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary to provide for a 3-year rather than a permanent program was crushed by a 51-to-25 vote. It was the Senate's first roll-call vote.

Early Action Forecast.

Cheered by this show of strength in the face of general criticism of both measures, Senate leaders drove to pass their measure by this weekend, while Chairman Jones forecast completion of the House bill tomorrow.

Both bills are so widely conflicting in control, penalty and benefit features that leaders freely conceded the farm bill actually will have to be written in conference between the two houses, after passage. Final enactment was not likely to come until the closing days of the session.

With the House cotton section salvaged, that chamber's Agriculture Committee today faced attempts to strike out corn marketing quotas, and efforts by an inflationary bloc to write mandatory parity prices for farmers into the House measure. One more stiff hurdle, the rice section, and the House bill will be ready for final action.

McNary and Johnson Unite.

Senators McNary and Hiram Johnson, California Progressive, fought side by side in their futile battle to limit operations of the so-called permanent farm program to three years.

McNary charged discrimination in favor of the five commodities named in the bill, and called "the ever-normal granary" program "the ever-present menace." Johnson urged the limitation as a "brake," and urged the Senate to devote more considered judgment to the bill.

But the McNary limitation was voted down after the Administration leadership warned against jeopardizing the ever-normal granary program and providing only "temporary relief."

Sleeping Boy Killed When Army Plane Falls Upon House

Austin, Tex., Dec. 7 (AP).—An Army plane listed as missing from Kelly Field went out of control over Austin tonight and crashed into a house, killing the pilot, a 2-year-old boy in bed and seriously injuring the boy's brother.

The house and plane were so badly wrecked that it took hours to recover the body of the pilot. Kelly Field officers believed he was Capt. F. A. Avelino, of the Mexican army, a student in the United States Army advanced flying school.

The dead child was Leonard H. Albright, son of a University of Texas professor. He and his older brother Spencer, who was injured, were sleeping in the back room into which the plane crashed after striking another house the parents were cut by flying debris.

Douglas Advises G. O. P.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Dec. 7.—Lewis W. Douglas, former Director of the Budget, appealed tonight for the abandonment of traditional high-tariff beliefs and for support of projected reciprocal trade agreements.

Douglas also urged revision of Federal taxes to permit capital formation, the slashing of Government expenditures and the postponement of business reforms.

His appeal was made in three directions—to the businessmen of the Nation, to the Republican Party and to the Administration.

World-Wide Crisis.

He made it in the belief the present business recession, if permitted to continue, may "gradually assume the proportions of a world-wide economic depression."

That depression, he said, which "may well gather momentum as it goes," may even "carry the whole group of democracies in its wake."

Douglas spoke before the Economic Club, in the Hotel Astor, at a dinner honoring Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia. Glass and Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the Maritime Commission, both speaking extemporaneously, differed widely in their expressions regarding the Administration. Glass said he is "totally in disagreement with nearly everything" the New Deal has done; Kennedy said, "I still am an enthusiast of the New Deal."

Sees Weakening of Democracies.

In forecasting a possible depression resulting from "the absence of a determined and unmistakable change in the course of public policy," Douglas warned such a depression would further weaken the democracies of the world and strengthen the autocracies, "making the autocracies far more arrogant than they have dared to be," adding:

"A serious economic depression in the democracies of the world would certainly accentuate the intensity of the controversy between the civilization in which man's spirit has been liberated and the civilization in which it has been imprisoned."

Urging businessmen to abandon traditional beliefs in high tariffs he besought them to see "the significance of the very courageous efforts

10 Cargo Ships To Be Built by Maritime Body

$20,000,000 Program to Be Started by U. S. Soon, Official Says.

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission is ready to start in the next two weeks a $20,000,000 program for rehabilitating the American merchant marine, it was learned yesterday.

An official said that "In a week or ten days" bids would be asked on about that amount of construction. This will include at least ten and probably a dozen 9,000-ton cargo vessels, costing about $1,750,000 each.

The commission also has projected a tanker-construction program in conjunction with ten oil companies, headed by Standard Oil of New Jersey. The companies are to bear the basic cost of the vessels, the Government paying only for building into them such features as will make them suitable for naval auxiliaries in wartime.

In addition the commission is scheduled to ask in a day or so for bids on remodeling a Government-owned vessel for a training ship. This probably will cost $400,000 to $500,000.

The officials said the cargo vessels would be built entirely for Government account, unless one of the private, Government-subsidized ship lines arranged to take over one.

Designs for the new cargo ships call for a speed of 15½ knots, and they, like the tankers, will be designed for conversion into naval auxiliaries if needed.

New Deal Seeks Aid of Business, Wallace Says

By Agnes E. Meyer.

As Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, in a recent address made the statement that "President Roosevelt has a friendly understanding of the problems of the larger businessman," The Washington Post asked him the direct question whether, in his opinion, the attitude of the Administration toward business had changed.

"I would say that the Administration is more friendly toward business today than ever before," replied Secretary Wallace, without hesitation. "During the past two months the Administration has realized as never before the fact that there must be the utmost cooperation between capital, labor and agriculture.

"In saying this I do not mean to indicate that any action the Administration might take with respect to modification of the undistributed profits tax, the capital gains tax, or toward balancing the budget will pull us out of the present recession. The problem of cooperation to bring about the maximum of balanced abundance is far greater and deeper than taxation revision or budget balancing.

"On the other hand businessmen will only hurt themselves if they force a point of view which they thought was appropriate to the sit-

Father, Mother and Three Children Need $110 To Renew Hope, Food, Furniture and Clothing

IN THE LAST SEVEN YEARS Mr. O'N has had several temporary periods of unemployment. Each time, heretofore, the public assistance division of the Welfare Department has carried his family through these periods. This year however, he had to be refused. He is considered "employable." There are no relief funds for such as he.

No. 7—O'N Family.

The Post today presents the seventh case among the 25 neediest families of the District's unemployed employables, for whom its Christmas fund will be collected. There is no relief fund for them. They are deserving cases, investigated by an agency of the Council of Social Agencies. Their need is measured in terms of money. Unless they are helped now, the amount they need later will be much larger.

Mr. O'N was on WPA last year but resigned when he had an opportunity to take a job on his own. He is a tinner and roofer by trade. Now he cannot be put back on WPA because it has been pared to the bone.

Mr. O'N is getting a stoop in his shoulders and a discouraged look in his eyes. When he and his wife were married, rather impetuously, in 1928, they looked into the future with the unbridled hope of youth. They started out in a furnished room but planned they would work together and it would be but short time until they had their own home!

Their first savings went when Janey was born and then came the depression. Two other children have arrived.

Not only have the O'Ns never owned their home. They have never even owned their own furniture. In addition to their scant clothes they own nothing in the world except a few kitchen utensils.

The O'Ns faced eviction Thanksgiving eve. In broken, torn shoes and patched trousers the desperate father walked from one possible place of employment to another. How could he approach prospective employers with confidence and surety of manner under such circumstances?

In the late afternoon of the day before scheduled eviction, a welfare agency assured him he would not be put out. Temporary arrangements were made whereby he could get food. Through good fortune, the pastor in his parish referred Mr. O'N to a part-time job to which he has been going each morning as though walking on air.

What can be done for the O'Ns? The most constructive thing, pending a permanent job, would be to establish the family in more desirable living quarters, clothe them and make it possible for them to have their own furniture.

In order that Mr. O'N may retain his self-respect and his job it is necessary for him to have new shoes and clothing at once. Mrs. O'N and the children need shoes and clothing.

It is possible to buy hope, furniture and clothing for this family for $110. Do you want to make your own Christmas happier by helping them?

Contributions to the 25 neediest cases made Monday and Tuesday totaled $177, bringing the total to date to $687.25. (List on page 9.)

Send contributions to The Washington Post Christmas Fund or leave them in box provided on first floor of The Post Building. Any amount will help, however small.

Hopkins' Daughter Diana, 5, To Spend Yule at White House

WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' 5-year-old daughter, Diana, will hang her stocking from a White House mantle on Christmas Eve.

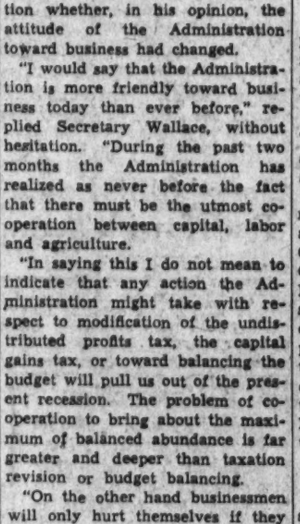
A few hours later she will romp about in the hilarious celebration which annually transforms President Roosevelt's quiet bedroom into a noisy nursery.

The little girl has been the House guest of James Roosevelt's daughter, Sara, since her mother's recent illness and death.

This and other plans for the White House Christmas were revealed yesterday by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The holiday arrangements, spiced heavily with two new family romances, provide for the usual hustle and bustle program for the First Lady and gaiety at America's No. 1 mansion.

High points of the festivities will be a children's party on December 27, and a dance in honor



DIANA HOPKINS.

Du Pont Urges Vast Outlay for Plant Building

Proposes $25,000,000,000 Plan to Make 3,000,000 Jobs, if U.S. Will Help.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 6.—Creation of 3,000,000 new jobs, investment of $25,000,000,000 of capital in expansion of industry and a new recovery program over the next two to ten years were proposed to the Nation's manufacturers today by Lammot du Pont, president of E. . du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Addressing the National Association of Manufacturers, meeting here in annual convention, du Pont said such a program was "staggering in its size and complexity" but "neither hopeless nor impossible." To achieve it, he declared, Government must give industry "a reasonable amount of certainty upon which it can count in planning current and future operations."

Earlier the 600 executives of American business had heard William B. Warner, president of the association, plead for teamwork between labor and capital, management and Government and appeal to the latter for evidence of a "changed attitude toward business."

"The bulk of responsibility for future social betterment," du Pont asserted, "should be placed on industry's shoulders. And industry accepts the responsibility."

New jobs, new wealth and agricultural prosperity, could be produced only through research, planned development and planned expansion of plant, sales and administrative facilities, he said. That meant, he added, "planned expenditure of capital months and years in advance of any penny of return."

Asks for Certainty.

Describing business as blanketed by a "fog of uncertainty" over future taxes, labor conditions, inflation or deflation, possible new restrictions on capital and profits, du Pont demanded:

"If industry is to be given the fair opportunity to work that it seeks, some definition should be given to what, to those of us in industry, would constitute a fair opportunity.

"My own thought may be summed up in a sentence: Give industry a reasonable degree of certainty upon which it can count in planning current and future operations."

To that end, he asserted, "the labor situation must be stabilized . . . the legal rules under which industry must operate should be stabilized immediately," and business given "positive and reliable assurance that the complicated terms and conditions under which it must function are finally determined, subject only to an unmistakable public demand for their amendment."

The speaker, declaring that the purchasing power of a part of the population was too low, that "some parts of our agriculture are disorganized," and that "the whole future is a gigantic question mark," made it plain that he criticized no one for the present industrial recession.

"What has been done, wisely or unwisely, is behind us. Let us leave it there," he said.

Warner Calls for Peace.

Warner, president of the McCall Co., called for "repeal for modification of those laws which have contributed to the downward trend," availability of capital funds "to enable industry to go forward and expand both production and employment," cessation of industrial strife and avoidance of increasing layoffs of workers.

If Barnum was right that "there is a sucker born every minute," the "sucker birthrate has declined considerably," Raymond Rubicam, advertising executive, told the delegates.

He based his assumption on polls taken by the American Institute of Public Opinion under the direction of George H. Gallup, which, he said, indicated "fairness, good sense and perspicacity" on the part of the public.

The polls, he said, indicated the majority of the public was in favor of regulation of labor unions and their incorporation, peace between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. regulation of strikes, a balanced budget, reduction in relief expenditures, revival of the NRA and a constitutional amendment giving Congress the right to greater regulation over industry and agriculture.

Tax Burden Scored.

It was supposed, however, as indicated by the polls, to a third term for President Roosevelt, sit-down strikes, vigilantism, cash relief and revival of AAA.

Mark Graves, president of the New York State tax commission, assailed "uneconomic" taxation as a burden upon all groups of the population and called for repeal of the Federal undistributed profits surtax and the capital gains levy.

Graves attacked the principle of exempting Government securities from taxation, as affording a "haven of refuge, an opportunity, for capital to go on a sit-down strike." He said $50,000,000,000 is thus invested.

Advising the integration of Federal and State revenue systems Graves asserted the Federal Treasury monopolizes the most important tax fields. Integration, he said, would gives States and municipalities a larger share in income and estate taxes.

Swope Asks Promptness.

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., in an interview in the World-Telegram, said today prompt co-operative action by both Government and business was necessary to meet problems raised by the current business recession.

"There is no time or place," he said, "for reprisals or retaliation by either. Lack of confidence is at the background of our business recession. I don't think the trouble is anything basic."

Dr. Hsu to Speak.

Leonard Hsu, councilor for the ministry of industries of the Chinese government, here on special mission, will address a Princeton Club luncheon at 1 p. m. today at the Cosmos Club. Dr. Hsu is chairman of the Princeton-in-Yenching School of Public Affairs, Peiping.

Working for Washington

Mrs. Fry Gives Most of Time To Business of P.-T. A. Congress

MRS. WALTER B. FRY.

Membership Has Reached 16,000 Under Leadership of Present Leader; Disease Immunization on Writer's Agenda.

By Christine Sadler.

The District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers has 16,000 members—or more P.-T. A. workers than six small States can produce. Belonging to the congress are 69 associations, representing 86 different schools.

The group was organized in 1905 as the District Congress of Mothers and since that time has been one of the most active forces in Washington.

Mrs. Walter B. Fry, whose home is at 1201 Sixteenth street northwest, but who spends most of her time at headquarters in the N. E. A. Building, is the fifth president of the organization.

Serving Second Term.

She is serving her third year and her second term. Before she was president she was first vice president for a term and secretary for seven years. When her present term is ended she plans to take out more time for her home.

"At last, I'll take enough time to keep fresh flowers in the house. I don't have time to cut them now, even after my husband raises them," she said.

"But I do try to keep Saturday and Sunday for my family, and I always urge all of our members to do the same."

The Congress of Parents and Teachers this winter is stressing its interest in immunization and quarantine laws for the District.

No Fast Rules.

"We have no hard and fast rules about quarantine at this time, and the subject of immunization is one that everybody needs to keep working on. Not nearly enough of it is done," she declared.

"Probably our biggest problem, though," she added, "is going to be clothing the needy school children. The demands are more than ever before. We have asked the Community Chest to let us have $1,500 to purchase shoes and overshoes, for which we are having more calls than we can fill."

The P. T. A.'s pioneered in dental clinics in the District schools, and will keep up the work with additional educational programs this year. Likewise, they are continuing their free school lunch program.

"Years ago we inaugurated the program of serving milk and crackers in the schools. We have expanded the work a great deal since that time and all of our associations pride themselves on the manner in which they have taken care of the lunch problem in their schools," Mrs. Fry said.

Mrs. Fry is a native of St. Louis, but moved to Washington 24 years ago. She became interested in P. T. A. work 16 years ago when her youngest son came home from school and told her she should join.

Interested in Training.

She personally is very much interested at this time in the training of P. T. A. leaders. "We have had training classes, and the two-day institute this summer at George Washington University was of great benefit; but we still need more leaders.

"I know that they can be trained, or I would not be so interested. I was scared to raise my voice above a whisper when I started out, and my hands shook when I got up to read a paper. Many women just like that are eager to help, but think they do not have the talent," she said.

Mrs. Fry is a member of the Entre Nous Club and an Eastern Star. She has a husband and four children.

On Friday—Charles F. Foster, president of the Hillcrest Citizens Association, is next in the "Working for Washington" series.

'Bossy' Gillis Loses Race for 4th Term

Boston, Dec. 7 (AP).—Newburyport's fiery mayor, Andrew J. "Bossy" Gillis, was defeated today for a fourth term by former City Solicitor James F. Carens in one of eight mayoralty elections in Massachusetts.

Meriden, Conn., Dec. 7 (AP).—Judge Francis R. Danaher (Republican) was elected mayor today by a plurality over the incumbent, Stephen L. Smith (Democrat) who sought a third term.

Financier Sees Easing of U. S. Trade Attitude

Senate Witness Predicts Housing Will Lead Trade Recovery.

By the Associated Press.

A business leader indicated yesterday he saw signs of better cooperation between Government and business.

Urging legislation to advance President Roosevelt's program for a boom in home building, Clarence Woolley, chairman of the board of the American Radiator Co., told the Senate Banking Committee:

"It is gratifying to note that the atmosphere of tension between Government and business is beginning to be eased."

Nathan Straus, of New York, was approved by a Senate Labor Committee as head of the United States Housing Authority and announced later that he hoped to earmark funds for some projects today.

Praises Objectives.

"I am sure that many business leaders are liberal-minded men and sympathetic to many, if not all, of the principal objectives of this Administration," Woolley told Banking Committee Senators. "I know that American business men want to see social security for our people. Most of the arguments and criticisms of business men have been on methods rather than on objectives, although we have sometimes been in too much of a hurry to distinguish between the two.

"Business leaders and business organizations have not always been good tempered, even when expressing just criticism of administrative methods they believe to be unsound. It is only fair to say that business has felt at times that administrative pronouncements have not appealed to that sense of co-operation so essential to the success of any human endeavor.

"A house divided against itself cannot stand. Business is not alien to the American household. It is part and parcel thereof and has similar faults and similar virtues. Industry and government cannot succeed in opposition. There is now apparent some indication that combat and strife are being superseded by co-operation on the part of these controlling factors in the economic life of the country.

Sees Recovery Aid.

"The adoption of the President's recommendations for amending the national housing act, involving co-operation on the part of Government, finance, industry and labor, will make for broad and sound business recovery and prosperity."

Straus tentatively ruled for a conference of municipal housing officials here that bathrooms would not count as rooms, and that neither would utility rooms, laundries, closets, entries and halls. This would permit construction of larger family dwelling units under the program, since the law limits such units to four rooms.

Straus appeared before the Labor Committee to defend his eligibility against questions raised by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan.

Vandenberg had suggested the committee study Straus' connections with Hillside Home, Inc., a Bronx, N. Y., house development financed in part by the Public Works Administration.

After the hearing, Vandenberg announced:

"Mr. Straus made a thoroughly frank statement to the committee and eliminated any legitimate objection to his confirmation as housing administrator as far as I am concerned."

Chairman Thomas (Democrat), Utah, announced later the committee agreed unanimously to approve the nomination.

Ickes to Be Arbiter.

Vandenberg said Straus had disposed of 25 acres of land on the Boston post road for the Hillside project but retained a 100-foot strip along the road and started "the development of this business frontage as a private investment."

"Mr. Straus frankly states that he would welcome a private profit from this development," Vandenberg said, "and believes he is entitled to it by way of compensation for having sold the balance of his farm for the housing project at the lowest square footage cost of any housing project in the land."

Welles' Speech on Brazil Indorsed by Senators Lewis, Pittman, La Follette and Nye.

UNDERSECRETARY of State Welles' speech at George Washington University Monday, indicating this Government does not regard the Vargas government in Brazil as of fascist tendency, won general Senatorial approval yesterday.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, congratulated Welles on "having given the first complete exposition of the relation of Brazil to the United States in the present crisis of that South American republic."

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said the speech "is in line with the well-defined policy of the United States of noninterference with the internal affairs of other nations. And that policy should be maintained," he added.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, said he indorsed Welles' viewpoint, "so long as that government is internally provided. I always have been opposed to any punitive expeditions," La Follette declared. "I am in favor of the policy of recognizing any de facto government, so long as that government is not set up by outside influences."

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, said Welles' statement, if it could be interpreted as a policy of this government, was "very encouraging."

JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, of Little Rock, Ark., a nephew and namesake of the late majority leader, was admitted to practice yesterday before the Supreme Court. He was sponsored by his wife, an attorney who was admitted to the bar of the high tribunal some time ago. The court also admitted Thomas F. McAllister, special assistant to the Michigan attorney general and an associate justice-elect of his State's Supreme Court. He was introduced by Attorney General Homer Cummings.

SENATOR O'MAHONEY (Democrat), Wyoming, proposed to put the Wool Top Futures Exchange of New York under Federal regulation after its operations were criticized before a special Senate committee.

O'Mahoney introduced an amendment to the commodity exchange act to extend its provisions to cover wool and any other agricultural commodities traded in for future delivery.

His action was taken after the committee, headed by Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, heard leading wool growers, dealers and manufacturers assail trading on the exchange as "ruinous to all phases of the wool industry."

REPRESENTATIVE MAURY MAVERICK (Democrat), of Texas, ardent supporter of President Roosevelt's proposal to reorganize the Supreme Court, was unruffled on learning his son had won a debate by denouncing the plan.

"He's just a good debater," boomed the Texan. "He didn't choose his side; they gave it to him."

Buzzard Roost Power Grants Called Illegal

Duke Counsel Questions Right of U. S. to Aid Public Projects.

By the Associated Press.

W. S. O'B. Robinson, jr., counsel for the Duke Power Co., argued yesterday before the United States Supreme Court that the Government was unconstitutionally attempting to finance construction of a publicly owned electric plant at Buzzard Roost, S. C.

He spoke after arguments had been concluded on a similar case brought by the Alabama Power Co. in an effort to stop the making of Government loans and grants for electric plants in four Alabama municipalities.

Robinson asserted Secretary Ickes was using power delegated to him under the Public Works program "to the altogether different and wholly unrelated and unauthorized purpose of reducing local power rates."

He said rates at the Buzzard Roost plant would be 21 to 30 per cent below the Duke company's.

"The petitioner will be forced to reduce its rates, it will be deprived of its business, and will suffer a net loss of $250,000 a year in three counties alone, not to mention the destruction of its property."

In the Alabama case, Solicitor General Stanley Reed and Jerome Frank, special assistant to the Attorney General, for the government, called the loans constitutional. William H. Thompson, attorney for the Alabama Power Co., earlier had assailed the financing program as unconstitutional.

Frank disputed what he said was Thompson's contention that the government was engaged in a "campaign against the power companies," and that the four Alabama municipalities, building electric plants with Federal funds, were required to purchase power from the Tennessee Valley Authority. Reed said the loans do not violate States' rights.

Roosevelt Is Able To Parry Queries Despite Jaw Ache

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt told reporters yesterday his ailing jaw was all right, and proceeded to demonstrate his tooth trouble had not impaired his skill at parrying questions.

"The business recession is getting worse," one reporter said. "What are you planning to do about it?"

The President replied that the statement was an assumption and that at any rate he did not wish to tie his hands by announcing a program. The reporter asked if business conditions were not growing worse, and Mr. Roosevelt declared people were arguing the question both ways.

Another asked if the Government's policy of buying domestic silver at 77.57 cents an ounce would be continued beyond the end of the year. Mr. Roosevelt told him he was many days ahead of time, but that there might be some news about the 24th or 25th.

Examination of X-ray photographs disclosed "no bone involvement" in Mr. Roosevelt's unhealed tooth socket, and it will be unnecessary to scrape the jawbone.

Dodd to Leave Berlin; Wilson May Take Post

Envoy's Resignation Takes Effect in January; Nazis Pleased.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Dec. 7.—United States Ambassador William E. Dodd has resigned, effective in January, it was ascertained here tonight.

The resignation was presented on a visit by Dodd to Washington last summer and it occasioned no surprise to the American colony here, for Nazis in authority have said openly they considered him persona non grata.

The Ambassador opposed American acceptance of an invitation to be represented at the Nazi party congress at Nurnberg last September, and this aroused resentment.

The United States, however, was represented at the party rally by Prentiss Gilbert, charge d'affaires of the embassy.

Dodd, 52, became envoy to Germany in June, 1933.

By the Associated Press.

It was reported yesterday in diplomatic circles Hugh R. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of State, soon will be appointed Ambassador to Germany to replace William E. Dodd.

State Department officials declined to discuss the report, referring all inquiries on the subject to the White House. Wilson also declined to discuss the matter.

Wilson, veteran career diplomat, has served only four months as Assistant Secretary of State. He was called to the post by Secretary Hull after more than 10 years as Minister to Switzerland.

Oregon to Insure Safety in Election In Lumber Mills

Portland, Oreg., Dec. 7 (AP).—The power of the State of Oregon was swung into line today by Gov. Charles H. Martin to insure safety and honesty in an election he called for Thursday to give lumber workers the choice of A. F. of L. or C. I. O. affiliation.

The big lumber mills here have been closed 118 days by a jurisdictional fight between the opposing labor groups.

Last night Gov. Martin declared he was determined to end the "threat of gangster rule." He said the National Labor Relations Board had shown "complete ineptitude," and "ran out of a critical situation."

Traffic Death Toll Here Climbs to 96

The District traffic death toll mounted to 96 yesterday, only 3 less than the total number last year.

The latest victim was Thomas Langford, 75, of 248 Carroll street, Takoma Park, D. C., who succumbed in the Washington Sanitarium to injuries suffered when struck by an automobile while crossing the street in front of his home November 27.

Police said the car was operated by Ellen P. Hayde, of Kensington, Md.

James Gardner, 60, colored, of Hyattsville, Md., died late yesterday in Casualty Hospital as the result of injuries suffered Sunday morning when he was truck by a hit-and-run driver near his home.

Miss Anne Bfates, 17, of the 1000 block of G street northeast, suffered fractures of her skull, left jaw and bruises when she was struck by an automobile at Twelfth street and Maryland avenue northeast.

Julia Harper, 65, of Brentwood, Md., died in Casualty Hospital last night from injuries received in an automobile accident in Brentwood on November 21. The accident occurred at Rhode Island avenue and Bunker Hill road.

4 'Grand' Paid for Life Eternal, Ailing Angel Bedevils Divine

By the United Press.

New York, Dec. 7.—They took Father Divine, the bald little Negro whom Harlem calls "God," into Supreme Court today and asked him whether it was true that he had accepted $4,500 from one of his "angels" and, in return, had promised her she would live forever.

"God" adjusted the purple handkerchief in the breast pocket of his blue serge coat and said softly:

"Generally, I do evangelical evangelistic work. I travel and wheresoever I be I carry on evangelical evangelistic work. Wherever and whenever a crowd assembles around me I speak volitionally."

He was at it again—talking the strange jargon that has been the despair of every lawyer who has questioned him in an attempt to learn the sources of the vast fortune which enables him to have a private airplane and an imported automobile, and to load the tables in all of Harlem's "heavens" with rich food.

Today's proceedings was an examination before trial in the case of Verinda Brown, who is known to the followers of Father Divine as "Rebecca Grace."

She contends she paid $4,500 to "God" on the promise that he would give her food, shelter and eternal life. The passing of the years brought pains and ills and in Verinda's mind grew the suspicion she was not going to live forever. So she sued Father Divine for her $4,500.

Today's appearance was one of the few departures "God" has made from "Heaven" since he umpired the "promised land Olympic games" at a "Heaven" near Kingston, N. Y., last summer. The chief athletic event was watermelon eating, after which "God" did some evangelical evangelistic work.

Ordinarily, when "God" leaves "Heaven" he is followed by a battalion of angels flapping their arms and crying "Father, you're so sweet," but today he had only two angels in attendance—a white man who wouldn't tell his name, and a colored man who told everyone to call him "Honesty Quietness."

The lawyers asked "God" where he carried on his evangelical evangelistic work. He smiled on them benevolently and said:

"From my own state of consciousness."

Did "God" promise Verinda Brown and her husband, Thomas ("Onward Universe") Brown a lot of "heavenly treasure" in return for the four and a half grand?

"The way I observe the heavenly treasure," Father Divine replied, "it is an unmaterial, nonmaterial treasury of the storehouse of wisdom and courage."

"But did he promise them heavenly treasure, yes or no?"

"As I foresaid," he answered, "I do not keep a diary of what might have been experienced. If anything appears on the table, such as flowers, they try to get them without my knowledge."

"Honesty Quietness" giggled.

"The only reason I was here today," Father Divine explained, "is that stipulations of legal matters had been mentioned of which I had foreknowledge."

Then—puff!—he was gone in a cloud of smoke—from the exhaust pipe of a glittering town car.

Spanish Envoy Avers Franco Can Never Win

de Los Rios Cites Delay in Rebel Drive, Claims 500,000 in Army.

Republican Spain—its soldiers, its farmers, its men and its women—will never bow the knee to Gen. Francisco Franco, Ambassador Don Fernando de Los Rios said last night in a press conference at the Spanish Embassy.

"If Franco is going to launch an offensive, why, then, doesn't he?" asked the bearded diplomat, who once was president of the University of Madrid. "We are not afraid. I know that we will resist, and that our victory is inevitable."

In constant touch with shell-raked Madrid, Senor de Los Rios said he doubted that Franco would start an offensive before snow flies over the Castillian plateaus.

"Everyone," said he, "is awaiting the rebel offensive and its postponement has been taken as a definite sign of weakness.

"While opinion abroad is inclined to consider the Spanish war practically over and the results a foregone conclusion, the people of republican Spain have a very different conclusion. In Madrid, Barcelona and Valencia, everyone knows that the war is just beginning. And everyone is aware and determined that the war shall not end until every inch of Spanish soil has been won back for the Spanish Republic.

"The republican troops have a morale that is already superior to that of the rebels. An illustration of this is that, despite the insurgent preparation for a great attack, a large number of their Spanish soldiers desert each week to the government side."

Ambassador de Los Rios estimated that the new republican army had at least 500,000 soldiers, against 160,000 Spaniards, Italians, Germans and Moors under Franco's banners.

Russia Awaits Allies Before Fighting Japan

Moscow Will Insist Upon Full Support From Other Powers.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, Dec. 7.—Soviet Russia will insist upon full support from other big powers with Far Eastern interests before her army acts to drive the Japanese back from the frontiers of Outer Mongolia, diplomats reported tonight.

The Soviets were said to have informed Great Britain and France they have no intention of becoming embroiled in a conflict with the Japanese "at present" unless assured of foreign support even though they are confident of military supremacy.

Diplomats believed Moscow is waiting for a possible weakening of the Japanese—militarily and financially.

Soviet military sources asserted Russia's air strength is so formidable she would be able to send more than 1,000 fighting planes to China and still retain enough planes—bombers and fighters—to maintain supremacy over Germany.

These sources said China's lack of preparations, inadequate air fields and shortage of gasoline supplies explained Russia's seeming lack of support.

British government leaders were expected to consider advisability of making a direct protest to Tokyo against the bombing of British vessels at Wuhu and alleged "invasion" of a British-owned hotel in Shanghai by Japanese soldiers.

Three vessels and a British-owned barge have been bombed in recent days and Lieut. Comdr. H. D. Barlow, of H. M. S. Ladybird, was wounded by shrapnel. Japanese spokesmen said the bombing was directed against Chinese troops fleeing across the Yangtze River from Wuhu, but British naval officers said no Chinese troops were near the British vessels at the time.

G.W. Doctor Cites Rarity of Syphilis On U.S. Campuses

Less than one-tenth of 1 per cent of college and university students of this country have been found to have syphilis, Dr. Daniel Borden, George Washington University health director, reported yesterday to President Cloyd H. Marvin, following Marvin's refusal to permit G. W. students to submit to Wasserman tests. The president based his refusal on the fact it was planned to have medical students make the tests.

The student group led by Howard W. Ennes, jr., editor of the University Hatchet, had inaugurated a drive to give all students free tests.

325-Pound Buck Shot in Maryland

Oakland, Md., Dec. 7 (AP).—Hubert Foy, of Swanton, near here, has established a new record for deer hunters to shoot at—literally and figuratively—the State game department said today.

Warden E. Lee LeCompte said Foy bagged an eight-point buck last week which tipped the scales, dressed, at 274 pounds. Allowing about 40 pounds loss in the dressing process, LeCompte estimated the buck must have weighed about 325 pounds.

The previous record, so far as game department files were concerned, was a buck, killed last year, which weighed 284 pounds not dressed.

Explorers, Now 745 Miles From World's Axis, Warn Huge Ice Cake Is in Danger of Breaking Up; on Ice 200 Days.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Dec. 7.—Four Soviet explorers drifting from the North Pole toward the Atlantic indicated today they were ready to be rescued as their ice floe approached possible danger.

In the 200 days since they landed at the top of the world, the campers have floated 745 miles and today reached the position 82.23 degrees north and 6.52 degrees west—off northeast Greenland.

Otto Schmidt, bearded chief of the Soviet Arctic venturers, has indicated the men may be taken off the ice in January.

Ivan Papanin, chief of the camp, reported today by wireless that the campers "won't be ashamed to return to the mainland since we have collected much valuable data."

His companions are Peter Shirshoff, marine biologist; Eugene Fedoroff, magnetologist, and Ernest Krenkel, radio operator.

They landed at the Pole from an airplane May 21 with nine tons of food, and Papanin today indicated they expected to be rescued by airplane.

Fedoroff has had to suspend measurement of magnetic variations, as the campers' floe rotates six or seven degrees daily.

Krenkel meanwhile has rigged up a spare radio set on a sled in event a sudden ice jam should force the explorers to move their camp hastily.

Recently he wirelessed:

"The last strong wind caused wide fissures and formed new piles of pack ice. . . .

"Around the camp is a wide passageway. It is not particularly pleasant here during a snowstorm. The fine snow penetrates even the thickest clothing.

"Our hut is like a cake with lots of icing. The entrance is closed securely by a triple door—a curtain. . . . The floor of the entrance is taken up by four pairs of so-called tapochki (light sport shoes). You could easily bathe a 2-month-old baby in any one of them. . . .

"In the middle of the vast expanse of the Arctic, our dwelling is confined to three square meters (32 square feet).

"Each of us has his own corner where he keeps all kinds of trifles. . . .

"During the day the lamps are in the middle of the room and we arrange ourselves around them, like fire worshipers.

Shoes, Stockings Donated for Poor

George D. Horning, of the Arlington County pawnbroker's exchange bearing his name, has donated 125 pairs of shoes and 250 pairs of stockings for Christmas bags for needy children, Mrs. John S. Bennett, superintendent of Central Union Mission, announced yesterday.

Approximately 1,000 cretonne bags have been distributed, to be filled with articles for boys and girls from 2 to 12, but there still are 700 available, Mrs. Bennett said.

Gift bags, which will be given to children at the Christmas party at Loew's Capitol Theater December 23, with Mrs. Roosevelt passing them out, may be obtained by writing, telephoning or going to the Central Union Mission, 613 C street northwest.

Former Budget Director Warns New Deal to Delay Reforms.

of Secretary of State Cordell Hull to widen the markets of the world."

He asked the Republican Party to reexamine its traditional policies, and to support the projected reciprocal trade agreement with Great Britain as "the most practical and effective step which can be taken today toward preserving world peace."

He asked the Administration to "divest itself of its suspicions, to discard its theory that business is malicious, enterprise dishonest," and thereafter to modify the tax structure, reduce expenditures, put off certain business reforms, soften its attitude toward the utilities, and drop any attempt to establish wage rates by "arbitrary exercise of power."

All three groups, he pleaded, must "meet the present serious occasion with grave emotions."

Certain Congressmen Assailed.

From the same platform, Wayne C. Taylor, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, later condemned members of Congress, who "apparently represent special interests" reluctant "to remove as much as one foot from the trough or even to move over to make room for a really hungry fellow citizen."

Douglas pictured the situation as without alternative, declaring flatly:

"Either the vigor of private enterprise must be restored or there is to be no private enterprise whatsoever."

Stressing his own refusal "to accept the philosophy of despair," he outlined the two extremes of belief in the present state of affairs as on one hand "the hope—I know of none who entertain this hope—that the present recession may continue because perhaps it may throw the present Administration out of office" and "the assumption that there is a conspiracy to destroy the present Administration by private encouragement of the recession." The first of these two "is to misunderstand completely the seriousness of the present issue," and the second "is to imagine an amount of private power which is wholly nonexistent."

Douglas, discussing the recession, said that the fall in industrial production "has been more abrupt and continuous than anything of which we have record," while "unemployment is increasing at a distressingly rapid rate."

He scouted the belief that the recession is a "corrective movement" which will not develop into a deep depression "because none of the factors which caused the depression of 1929 are to be found in 1937." Douglas said this view is "inaccurate," that the recent prosperity was "the most delicate sort of inflationary recovery," and had been confined largely to industries producing consumers' goods.

This "extremely vulnerable" prosperity, he said, had halted for a variety of reasons, asserting:

"The attempt to rebuild the composition and thus to change the function of the Supreme Court was construed in some quarters as a direct attack on the form of Government respected in this republic since the date of its birth. Indeed by many it was thought to be in its implications an effort to change the fundamentals of the American social and economic structure."

Traces Recession to New Deal.

In thus tracing the recession to the Administration's conduct of affairs, he remarked that "when the philosophy implicit in the sit-down strikes was not rejected by the Administration, these suspicions grew."

Praising the "heroic efforts of the Secretary of State against a steady shrinkage of world markets, exchange restrictions, quotas, tariffs, an absence of world currency, a dearth of international loans," he said that this progressive restriction "has been made doubly bad by the slow, steady impairment of the freedom of wholly national markets," while over all he saw the "threat of inflation in the world-wide resort to deficit financing."

In this country, he said, the structure of taxation has substantially reduced the supply of investment capital "the most absolutely necessary implement of enterprise," while the Government views business as "a creature of illegitimate lineage and unholy intent."

Businessmen, he pleaded, must understand "it is folly of the highest order to expect a world, organized to produce and distribute a very vast quantity of goods, to exist with any happiness or prosperity within markets which have been reduced to the narrow limits of national boundaries."

Republicans, he said, must see that "if a subsidy is granted to one group, as a matter of ordinary justice it is impossible to withhold subsidies from other groups," with the result that "a nation so subsidized is a nation ultimately controlled and regulated by government itself." Then he asked: "May I not say to the members of the Republican Party that it is no crime to confess error, the only crime is to continue to commit it?"

The Administration, he said, must permit greater freedom in the markets for services as well as for goods and capital; must modify its attitude toward the utilities so that "this great industry may spend hundreds of millions of dollars without fear of reprisals or fear of destruction;" must regain control of expenditures, and must regard reforms for business as "relatively unimportant" compared with the "issue between authoritarianism on one hand and democracy on the other."

Taylor, speaking on the budget's relation to the national welfare, said:

"The President, the Secretary of the Treasury and other Administration spokesmen have stated vigorously and repeatedly their conviction that untimely, uneconomic expenditures in the form of public works or excessive subsidies to areas, industries and economic groups must stop." In condemning special interests, as opposing a balanced budget, he said:

"We must reluctantly agree that any Representative in either House of Congress who is incapable of thinking and acting in the national interest when the national interest is so clear is not qualified to represent a section of this country in the House, or a State in the Senate."

Senator Glass spoke before the club 24 years ago in a rousing defense of the Federal Reserve act, regarded in political circles as epochal, brought a burst of applause when he said:

"I cannot refrain from contrasting the difference between that age (when he was fighting for the Federal Reserve) and this era. Then, I was in eager and enthusiastic accord with everything that was being done. Today, I am totally in disagreement with nearly everything that has been done (by the Administration), and nearly everything proposed to be done."

"I went to Washington as a real enthusiast of the New Deal," Kennedy said. 'I still am an enthusiast of the New Deal. It isn't going to do any good to bellyache, or to say Roosevelt is no good, or that everybody is Washington is crazy. Whether you like it or not, he (the President) is going to be there three more years."

At the speakers' table were Henry Morgenthau, father of the Secretary of the Treasury; Thomas G. Watson, industrialist, and Arthur Hays Sulzberger, Eugene Meyer and Paul Block, publishers.

New Deal Seeks Aid of Business, Wallace Says

uation six months ago. The immediate problems of the first half of 1938 are so altogether different from those of the first half of 1937 that it is vital for businessmen in their own interests to consider in a new way how they may best cooperate with labor and with Government in bringing about a balanced prosperity.

"If, for example," the Secretary continued, "the practical businessmen are unable to see any strong renewal of private investment during the next six months, are they prepared to see Government funds used to prevent human misery even though the balancing of the budget is thereby temporarily postponed?

"It is of vital importance that Government, labor and the farmer should reassure capital, but it is equally important that capital should reassure these three groups. In general, the farmer and the laborer have not understood how vitally essential new capital is to their prosperity. In a graph the lines representing the rise and fall in farm income, the rise and fall in the pay roll of labor, and the rise and fall in the profits of capital are parallel to an astonishing degree.

"Farmers, laboring men and business have been aroused today as never before. They all desire a world of greater security and abundance. Business confidence and business prosperity cannot be built on any other foundation than that of security for the people as a whole. President Roosevelt sees clearly that to create this confidence the Nation needs the help of businessmen as well as of laboring men and of farmers.

"All of which suggests," concluded the Secretary, "that it is high time we should all get to work to make a bigger pie, instead of squabbling as to who is going to get the bigger share."

"Let me put this additional question very frankly," queried The Post reporter, not wholly satisfied. "Have businessmen any justification for continuing to think that the attitude of this Administration toward them is vindictive?"

It was apparent at once that Secretary Wallace was not only willing but glad to reply with equal frankness.

"So far as I am able to discover," he stated, "this Administration has no vindictive or punitive attitude toward any individuals or any group of citizens who are genuinely interested in serving the welfare of the Nation. The problem with which it is primarily concerned is how to bring about the best co-operation between these various groups and between the various regions of the country."

Ship From Baltimore Is Sinking in Red Sea

London, Dec. 7 (AP).—Lloyd's agent at Port Said, Egypt, reported today the 6,900-ton British steamer, Quarrington Court, en route from Baltimore to Calcutta, was sinking slowly in the Red Sea.

The Quarrington Court, her engine rooms flooded from an unreported cause, was taken in tow by the French motor vessel, President Doumer.

comparing the transaction to the cutting of a profits pie into ten pieces, of which the taxpayer takes one and the Federal Government takes nine," said the North Carolinian.

"I have no idea where the originator of this fantasy got his inspiration. It certainly did not come from our Federal tax laws."

Doughton said to "clear up this hallucination" he wanted to say that "the greatest possible Federal exaction from such a profit would be less than 79 per cent, which would leave the taxpayer more than two pieces of pie."

He said the 79 per cent tax would only be applied when the gain exceeded $5,000,000, and then would be applied only on that portion above $5,000,000, and then only when the asset had been held less than a year.

Still attacking the Harrison "pie" analogy, Doughton said not more than five taxpayers in the United States would have capital gains exceeding $1,000,000 in a year, and no more than 50 persons would have incomes large enough to subject them to an average effective tax rate of more than 63 per cent on total net income.

When Harrison heard of Doughton's pie story he merely smiled and repeated his own version. Harrison said he was referring to cases where not only the Government but State tax collectors as well claimed a share of the pie, and it was possible for both together to take more than 90 per cent.

Doughton said he did not mean to infer he was opposed to capital gains tax revision.

"In fact, I approve modification," he said, "and we are now busily engaged in working out a reasonable reduction in the existing rates. However, I deplore a distortion of facts relating to taxation, as it is difficult enough to solve our tax problems in the light of the true facts without having to combat prejudices and bias created by either intentional or inadvertent circulation of misleading statements."

Finally, Doughton requested the "patience" of the American people and "sufficient time for our committee to work out a revision of our tax laws in as scientific and equitable manner as is possible under existing circumstances."

Senate Is Blamed.

Laying responsibiliy for some of the undivided profits tax hardships at the door of the Senate, Doughton said the Ways and Means Committee wrote into the original bill "several cushions" and relief provisions which were designed to ease the burden of this tax upon debt-ridden corporations and upon small concerns that had need of repairing their capital structure."

"The Senate," he said, "did not agree to these relief provisions and, while their amendments to this provision of the House bill was vigorously contested by the House conferees the dire necessity for prompt passage of the bill, and the revenue needs which confronted us, forced our acceptance of the Senate's position to which it grimly held."

Doughton pointed to high Government costs, the vast national debt and current revenue needs in warning the tax administrators against "deluding ourselves with hopes for a substantial curtailment of taxes in the near future."

But he pledged his "best efforts" to revise and modify the undivided profits tax, effective January 1, 1938, but not retroactively.

Meantime, the House tax subcommittee continued tightening of administrative provisions in the present law. Later the group will turn again to a study of tax-exempt security interest as a field for taxation.

Informally, it was indicated the broad Supreme Court decision Monday permitting State taxation of independent Government contractors was not regarded as hindering the committee's exploration of tax-exempt security interest as a posible new tax source.

House Defeats Amendment to Eliminate Cotton Quota System.

amendment, while 47 Democrats and three Independents voted "No."

Borah Proposal Delayed.

Immediately afterward, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, proposed elimination of requirements that corn and wheat farmers sign adjustment contracts to qualify for continuance of soil conservation benefits. Action on the Borah amendment was postponed.

Minor changes in the bill were agreed to without a struggle as leaders consolidated forces to head off an imminent move to send the measure back to committee for rewriting.

Meanwhile, Ralph W. Moore, master of Texas State Grange, sent letters to members of Congress, calling bother House and Senate bills "impractical." The letter echoed the views of Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, that Secretary Wallace "does not know anything about cotton."

Corn Section Up Today.

The House refusal yesterday to eliminate cotton marketing quotas, virtually reversed the House action Monday to strike out wheat quotas. The amendment was proposed by Representative Kleberg (Democrat), of Texas. After its defeat, Jones predicted the House will eliminate the wheat amendment before final action on the bill.

Chairman Jones won another committee triumph when the House rejected an amendment by Representative A. F. Ford (Democrat), of Mississippi, to put cotton quotas on a State-wide rather than a county basis, also a reversal of former action.

The controversial corn section will be up for consideration in the House today, with conflicting moves afoot to attempt elimination of the quota system, to move up the date of its application, to reduce the amount of the corn quota and to make corn loans mandatory.

Planes, Troops Hunt Lost Filipino Officers

Manila, P. I. (Wednesday), Dec. 8 (U.P.).—Army, Navy and commercial planes flew over unexplored territory today in a search for two missing Philippine army planes carrying Brig. Gen. Paulino V. Santos and four other army officers.

Troops from four provinces converged on Sierra Madre to conduct ground searches in country which in part is wild and seldom penetrated. Two ships also entered the search.

Crew Is Taken Off Beached Navy Tug

San Diego, Calif., Dec. 7 (U.P.).—The crew and six WPA workers were rescued late today from the grounded naval tug U. S. S. Koka, off the rocky shore of San Clemente Island.

The 32 sailors, 2 marines and civilian employes commanded by Lieut. Theron Hare were taken off the tug by the destroyer U. S. S. Conyngham after a radioed plea for "immediate assistance." None was injured.

Sailor Freezes To Save Life of Comrade, Boat

Survivor Relates How Pal Stuck to Pumps Till Death Claimed Him.

A Washington boatman gave his life early yesterday in the tradition of the sea that his comrade and boat might be saved.

Death by freezing came to George Taft Zeaman, 28, while he worked at the water pumps in a 50-foot launch grounded in the Potomac River near Maryland Beach.

From his hospital bed in Fredericksburg, Va., Barnes told a story of acute suffering during the night as he and Zeamon struggled for life on the ice-covered and partly submerged boat 100 yards from the Virginia shore.

Wind, Spray Buffet Boat.

A biting wind and freezing spray swept the motor sailer for about ten hours after the vessel had sprung a leak and settled to the bottom in 10 feet of water. Temperature on the river Monday night was about 15 degrees.

The two Washington men left the flood gate boathouse at Fourteenth and Water streets Monday afternoon, towing a sailboat owned by H. E. Offhose, of California. Offhose hired the men to tow his boat to Baltimore, where it was to be placed upon a steamer for shipment to California. Offhose was in his sailboat, steering it. The launch is owned by H. F. McConnel, Alexandria lawyer, who had loaned it for the job.

Worked Bilge Bump.

When the leak was discovered Zeaman went to the engine room to work the bilge pump.

Knee deep in the icy water, hanging to the topmost part of the cabin, Barnes sought desperately to save his own life and to prevent the body of his friend from being washed away. Zeaman died about 4 a. m., Barnes recalled.

About dawn the numbed man attracted the attention of George Grymes, King George County farmer, who paddled a boat to the side and took off Barnes and Zeaman's body.

During the night the sailboat apparently had broken away and drifted toward shore. The Coast Guard rescued Offhose, who suffered from exposure.

Stepped Into Water.

Barnes said that about 8 o'clock Monday night Zeaman started below to make coffee, but stepped into water over his knees.

"There was only one overcoat aboard," Barnes related. "It belonged to me, but I gave it to Zeaman. After the boat had grounded there was nothing I could do. I was chilled to the bone and it would have been impossible to swim ashore.

"After Zeaman stopped breathing I was afraid I might freeze, too, so I stomped my feet and beat my body with my arms to keep awake and keep my blood moving. The boat would rock when hit by a wave and it took nearly all my strength to keep Zeaman's body from going overboard."

Zeaman lived at 329 Eleventh street southwest with his parents. Barnes lives with his wife and 10-year-old daughter at 625 L street southwest.

Va. Steel Magnate's Wife Files Action for Divorce

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—Mrs. Florence M. Llewellyn filed suit for divorce today from Paul Llewellyn, 47, of Rectortown, near Middleburg, Va.

Mrs. Llewellyn said they were separated November 23 after he had mistreated her. They were married in 1925 a short time after Llewellyn's first wife, Mrs. Margy C. Llewellyn, had been granted the then record alimony of $1,100 a month.

Air Current Saves Mine Clerk Lost in Tunnel Labyrinth

Pinckneyville, Ill., Dec. 7 (AP).—A clean, sweet current of air led 28-year-old Lawrence Lee to safety today after he had been lost in a coal mine for 41 hours.

The mine bookkeeper, who disappeared in the Briar Hill workings Sunday afternoon, followed the current to an airshaft in an adjoining mine, one of several connected by a labyrinth of tunnels covering 8 square miles.

Diggers going to work heard shouts from the bottom of the shaft. Fagged out, his clothing ripped and legs torn and bleeding, Lee was taken home and put to bed. His wife and their small daughter had waited at the mine entrance while rescuers searched the tunnels.

Thomson Fears Latin American Fascist Threat

Revolt Against Vargas May Bring Plea to Europe for Aid, He Says.

As if in answer to Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, Charles A. Thomson, member of the Foreign Policy Association, last night warned the Inter-American Center of George Washington University, in the second of three daily sessions at the United States Chamber of Commerce here, that a revolt in Brazil against President-Dictator Vargas might lead to a request for aid from the Fascist powers of Europe.

Welles, in an address Monday night, criticized American reaction to the political situation in Brazil and warned that the United States would tolerate no violation of the Monroe Doctrine.

The three-day conference will be ended tonight with a discussion of Pan-American commerce and finance. This afternoon's session will be devoted to intercontinental news and communications.

He May Be Imitated.

Speaking at a session on inter-American law and political relations, Thomson said the Vargas regime "lies somewhere midway between old-line caudillo dictatorship and fascism of the classical type."

"But it seems clear," he said, "that the Brazilian ruler has done some borrowing from Rome and Berlin, may do more, and that his example may be imitated by other Latin-American autocrats."

Should Fascism in Latin-America "link itself to the 'anticommunist front of Germany, Japan and Italy," he said, and the power of Vargas actually is threatened, "his easiest course will be to term the movement 'Communist' and seek aid from Germany and Italy—a request which those powers are likely to heed, if it can be turned to their advantage."

Fascists Activity Noted.

Fascist powers, he explained, have been building their fences in Latin-America for some time—not to gain colonies but to open stores of raw materials and large-scale consumer markets.

"In the campaign to extend their influence, they can count on valuable assistance from their nationals domiciled in Latin-America," he said. "During the past 50 years, Brazil has received 1,350,000 Italians, 175,000 Japanese and 155,000 Germans. Italians have flocked also into Argentina. Uruguay's population is one-third Italian. Its president—Gabriel Terra—has repeatedly expressed public admiration for Il Duce. It was Uruguay which recently sought to induce the other American countries to recognize Gen. Franco."

Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, former President of the Republic of Panama, said the Monroe Doctrine was a "cornerstone of Pan-Americanism," and pointed to the Congress of Panama in 1826 as strengthening the natural bonds between the Americas. These bonds, he said, are natural because "the Southern colonies, fighting for their political freedom, could not but have a feeling of admiration and friendship for those who had succeeded in establishing a free and prosperous Republic upon the American soil."

Progress of Pan-Americanism, he said, is "evident and palpable" despite "obnoxious doctrines, methods, practices or policies" in the past. These "old international bugaboos," he said, "have been replaced by the 'policy of the good neighbor.'"

Constitution His Topic.

Judge Otto Schoenrich, of New York, discussing "Pan-Americanism Through the Medium of Law," pointed out that the Constitution of the United States, "one of the most remarkable documents ever elaborated by man," had "served as a model and inspiration for all nations from Lake Superior to Cape Horn." Differences in local conditions and local viewpoint, he said, in some cases "would probably have counseled a different form of government," but the form embodied in the North American Constitution has been preferred.

He cited differences in the fundamental legal structure of North America and South America and showed how some of these barriers were being surmounted. In particular, he spoke of the difference in divorce laws and suggested some solution of the question of conflict among them.

1,400 at Sessions.

At yesterday's afternoon session, Dr. Hector David Castro, minister of El Salvador; Dr. Stephen P. Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education, and Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, professor of romance languages at George Washington University, addressed the conference. About 1,400 persons attended the sessions. Dr. Charles Gilmore Maphis, director of the Institute of Public Affairs, University of Virginia, was chairman of yesterday afternoon's session, and Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association, was chairman last night.

John L. Merrill, president of the Pan-American Society, will be chairman of this afternoon's session, and James S. Carson, chairman of the United States Committee of the Inter-American Commercial Arbitration Committee, will preside tonight.

organized and operated exclusively for educational and charitable purposes." Referring specifically to five art masterpieces Mellon gave the trust, the decision called the transfer "a complete and valid gift."

The board also upheld several large stock transfers, labeled tax-evasion devices by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. In six out of the ten charges brought against Mellon, the board ruled for the financier In three, their decisions upheld the Government. Another point was compromised.

The additional taxes to be awarded the Government are based on an interpretation of reorganizations in corporations founded by Mellon, it was explained. Donald D. Shepard, executor of Mellon's estate and trustee of the educational and charitable trust, yesterday said this part of the decision would be studied further and perhaps taken to the Philadelphia Circuit Court of Appeals.

According to the majority opinion of the board, written by E. H. Van Fossan:

"We have incorporated in our findings our conclusion that petitioner did not file a false and fraudulent return for the purpose of evading taxes. Little need be said in amplification. Just as the law cloaks every man with a presumption of innocence it likewise clothes him with a presumption of good faith in his business dealings. Fraud is never presumed. It must be proven by clear and convincing evidence. Having carefully considered all of the evidence and all of the inferences properly to be drawn therefrom, we find in our minds no doubt as to the correct determination."

Van Fossan quoted the Supreme Court as having said:

"Any one may so arrange his affairs that his taxes shall be as low as possible; he is not bound to choose a pattern which will best pay the Treasury; there is not even a patriotic duty to increase one's taxes."

"Politics of the crudest sort," was Mellon's description of the action taken in 1934 by Attorney General Cummings, authorizing the criminal proceedings against the former Secretary of the Treasury on charges of tax evasion.

Basis of Board Ruling.

During one of the long hearings which followed, Mellon was asked if he did not find the sessions tedious.

"Well, it gives you lots of time to think about something else," he replied.

Shepard said yesterday:

"Mr. Mellon never entertained the slightest doubt that the charge so unjustly made against him would be found to be without justification. We deeply regret that he did not live to read the repudiation of that charge which the decision rendered today has settled."

Issues on which the board ruled for the Mellon estate were:

The sale of 123,000 shares of Pittsburgh Coal Co. common stock to the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh for $500,000. (This was ruled a valid transaction and Mellon was justified in claming a loss of $5,675,000 on the deal.)

A deduction of $447,000 for loss involved in the sale of stock, which cost him $775,000, to the Ascalot Corporation, owned by his daughter, for $328,000.

Mellon's contention that he did not file fraudulent return with intent to evade taxes.

His claim that in 1921 he had sold to his brother bank stock totaling $10,000,000 and thus was not liable to the $47,000 in taxes the Government claimed on the stock.

His report of taxable profits gained by the liquidation of the Union Construction Co., of which he was one of four stockholders.

Deductions claimed for his gift of five old masters valued at $6,247,000 to the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Institution

Government Claims.

The portions of the decision on which United States attorneys expect to base a claim for about $700,000 were:

A deduction of $400,000 resulting from the sale of 27,000 shares of Western Public Service Corporation stock to the Union Trust Co.

Taxable gains amounting to $6,549,000, realized from the liquidation of the McClintic-Marshall Corporation, which Mellon, it was held, was not entitled to call a liquidation.

Taxable dividends paid by Mellon to the Union Construction Co., payments which Mellon was held not justified in considering loans.

On the tenth issue, the board held that a fair market value of the McClintic-Marshall Construction Co.'s stock was $300 a share. Mellon valued it at $500 a share, and Government attorneys argued it was worth only $140.

The five paintings referred to in the decision are Raphael's 'Madonna of the House of Alba," Botticelli's 'Adoration of the Magi," Perugino's 'Crucifixion of St. John, the Magdalene and St. Jerome," Van Eyck's "Annunciation" and Titian's "Venus With the Mirror."

Bought by Mellon from the Soviet government, the paintings are stored in the Corcoran Gallery pending the completion of the National Gallery or Art, being built here with Mellon's money.

Case Dates Back to 1934.

The tax case was opened March 11, 1934, when the Department of Justice announced that charges were being brought simultaneously against Mellon, James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York; Thomas S. Lamont, financier, and Thomas L. Sidlo, Scripps-Howard attorney.

The Sidlo case was settled within a month, the Lamont case was compromised and the charges against Walker were withdrawn.

Before Mellon received a notice of deficiency, the case against him was sent to a Federal grand jury. Meeting in Pittsburgh in May, 1934, the jury returned the presentment as not a true bill and thus gave Mellon a clean slate.

Meanwhile, Mellon had issued a statement deploring the "campaign of character-wrecking and abuse" he claimed had been conducted against him by the press and radio.

"I know there has been no evasion of taxes on my part," he announced. "I am glad the issue is joined at last and am quite content to leave the outcome to the courts and the good sense and fairness of the American people when all the facts are known."

Appealed to Board.

When the Attorney General and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue refused to withdraw their charges of fraud or to reduce their claim for additional taxes, Mellon went to the United States Board of Tax Appeals. He charged he had not been accorded the same treatment as other taxpayers, and pointed out specifically the commissioner's failure to notify him of his deficiency and to grant him a hearing.

Then was begun a long series of hearings. Opening in Pittsburgh in February, 1935, the case was transferred to Washington in May of that year. The sessions were continued here until June, 1936. Three large volumes of briefs were filed by both sides, and the testimony and arguments filled more than 10,000 pages.

The principal Government attorney was Robert H. Jackson, then assistant general counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue and now Assistant Attorney General. Mellon was represented by Frank J. Hogan, of Washington. The chief target of the Government was the validity of the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust, which now is financing the National Gallery of Art.

Mellon was called to the stand in 1935 on his eightieth birthday. During five days of cross-examination, he remarked:

"I would rather spend the rest of my days in jail than to submit to such tyranny."

Morgenthau Assailed.

Flush Excess Acid Waste and Poisons From Kidneys

Comfort Your Irritated Bladder and Stop Getting up Nights

Thousands of intelligent people have backache almost every day and don't know what causes it—others are nervous and irritable—thousands have to get up often at night—have frequent or scanty passage that sometimes smarts and burns—others have puffy eyes and shifting pains.

Perhaps the kidneys are to blame—sometimes waste, excess acid and poisons do not get thru the delicate filters of the kidney fast enough—they accumulate and may cause trouble.

Pharmacists can tell you that one grand and effective kidney diuretic and stimulant is GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—they bring results when a good kidney medicine is indicated.

But be very sure to ask for and get GOLD MEDAL—the original and genuine Haarlem Oil Capsules—right from Haarlem in Holland—for your health's sake—reject imitations.

Executives Ask National Policy Upon Airways

Conference of Industrial Spokesmen Appeals for 'Master Plan.'

Initial steps toward the development of a national airport policy, together with a move to obtain Federal financial aid in the construction and expansion of landing fields, were taken yesterday by a conference of representatives of the aviation industry.

Summoned by Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson, the conference adopted a series of resolutions recommending the development of a "master plan" for the airways of the Nation, showing "trunk, intermediate and feeder airways, together with the airports located on such airways."

Amendment of the air commerce act to permit the Bureau of Air Commerce to construct and expand air terminals or to lend financial aids to states and cities for such work was also recommended.

On the recommendation of Assistant Secretary Johnson the conference appointed a permanent committee to serve in an advisory capacity to the Bureau of Air Commerce. Its members are Fowler Barker of the Air Transport Association; W. C. Clayton of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce; Robert Aldrich of the National Association of State Aviation Officials; Charles P. Graddick, superintendent of the Air Mail Service of the Postoffice Department; John Berry of the United States Conference of Mayors; Commander Ralph Davison, United States Navy; Brig. Gen. H. H. Arnold, United States Army; Col. F. C. Harrington of the Works Progress Administration, and Fred Smith of the National Aeronautical Association.

Missouri Sheriff Scores FBI Tactics

Kansas City, Dec. 7 (A.P.).—The shooting of a Federal agent, H. A. Snow, in an attempt to trap an extortionist last night led to a protest from county officers tonight against the "secrecy" of Federal Bureau of Investigation man-hunting tactics.

Sheriff James L. Williams, in a telegram to J. Edgar Hoover, the bureau director, said "failure" of Federal agents "to co-operate" with local officers allowed "a dangerous killer to escape into our territory."

Snow was critically wounded.

Dwight Brantley, in charge of the F. B. I. field office here, said "we are not desirous of engaging in any controversy with any officer who is misinformed as to the facts or who is making a misstatement of the facts," when he learned of the sheriff's wire to Hoover.

Religion Dead to Many, Adventist Leader Says

"Multitudes who are now satisfied with a nominal religion, with a Christian name rather than a Christian life, with a dead formalism instead of a living experience, will be unable to withstand the day when Christs come in power and great glory," declared A. V. Olson, of Berne, Switzerland, in his week of prayer reading given in all Seventh Day Adventist Churches last night on "What Manner of Persons Ought Ye to Be." Mr. Olson is directing head of all Seventh Day Adventist activities throughout southern Europe.

"Not only is the wicked world scoffing at the doctrine of the coming of the Lord and the end of the world, but large numbers of religious leaders and multitudes of their followers are doing the same," he continued. "Just as the antediluvians scoffed at the idea that God would destroy the then existing world with a flood, so the people of our day scoff at the idea that Christ will come to destroy the present world."

Lieut Frank A. Varney Heads D. C. Policemen's Association

Traffic Executive First Official Honored by Privates' Group.

Lieut. Frank A. Varney, of the traffic division was elected president yesterday of the Washington Policemen's Association, first official to be so honored by that organization of 1,300 members, mostly privates. He will succeed Detective Sergt. John C. Dalglish.

Other officers elected by the association were Raymond F. Selby, vice president; Paul W. Proctor, second vice president; William J. Kerns, recording secretary; Henry M. Jett, trustee, and Edgar S. Waller, treasurer.

Lieut. Varney became a member of the Metropolitan Police Department in February, 1922, and was made a detective sergeant in 1930 for extraordinary service. He arrested J. J. Fisher, who confessed to setting four 7-alarm fires in one night and is now in St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

He is a member of the Board of Trade membership committee, the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, is a Mason and a member of Almas Temple, A. O. N. M. S. As president of the policemen's association Lieut. Varney will appear before the District Gommittee of Congress and before other official bodies in behalf of District policemen.

LIEUT. FRANK VARNEY.

Welfare Board to Study Plan To Cure Ill D. C. Employables

A plan by which indigent sufferers on District relief rolls who are unemployable due to ailments, may be cured and thus enabled to work, will be studied by a special medical committee formed recently by the Board of Public Welfare.

This announcement was made yesterday by Elwood Street, District welfare director. The committee is headed by Dr. F. X. McGovern.

The plan to be investigated is outlined in an article in the current issue of a sociological publication entitled "Repair vs. Relief in West Virginia," and written by J. D. Ratcliff.

In 1935, two West Virginians asked themselves the question: "How many are on relief merely because they are sick?" and set out to find the answer. As a result they set in motion one of the Nation's most glowing rehabilitation projects, Radcliffe continued.

He added:

"On the relief rolls they found indigent sufferers from a long list of ailments which can make a man unemployable—but which can be cured. Enigmatically enough, Government and charitable funds were available for people who were hopelessly sick, but none for people who were curable. The State preserved the latter in economic alcohol by paying them relief, but did nothing to make them fit again for productive labor."

The men who made the discovery were Joe W. Savage, secretary of the West Virginia State Medical Association, and Charles W. Ritter, of the State workmen's compensation department.

Relief, including food and commodity disbursements, cost $230 a family a year. Rehabilitation operations would cost nowhere like that much if doctors would agree to pare fees. Savage and Ritter sounded them out, and almost to a man the surgeons agreed to work for half their usual fees, Radcliff reported.

So ten unemployed men, ranging in age from 23 to 60, were selected. All but one were married. They had anywhere from one to seven dependents. One had a tumor on his elbow; another suffered from infected teeth and tonsils. There were several hernias and one bad case of bone infection.

Handpicked doctors were assigned to put these individuals back in working order. Once they were out of the hospital and had passed through a recuperation period, nine promptly found jobs.

In five months' operation of the plan, 314 persons with permanently correctible physical ailments got medical aid. Of these, 41.5 per cent are back again in gainful employment.

Possibility that a similar situation existed in the District was expressed by Street.

Meantime, Street announced that the special medical committee appointed by the District of Columbia Medical Society would visit all institutions and services of the Board of Public Welfare, to investigate medical needs and recommend improvements.

Text of Lewis Douglas' Appeals to G. O. P., New Deal and Business on Tariffs, Reforms and Trade Pacts

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Dec. 7.—Text of address by Lewis W. Douglas at the Economic Club here tonight:

It was not so very long ago that security markets were booming, industrial production was increasing, employment was rising and American markets were attracting capital from all corners of the globe. It was the prevailing view that recovery was here.

But within the short span of a few months the scene has shifted. Indeed, it has changed violently. Security markets have received a severe shock; industrial production has fallen abruptly—in fact, the fall has been more abrupt and continuous than anything of which we have a record, and unemployment is increasing at a distressingly rapid rate.

In some quarters the view is seriously held that the recent past and present movement is merely corrective; that what we are now experiencing cannot develop into a deep depression, because, it is believed, none of the factors which caused the depression of 1929 is to be found in 1937.

Believes View Inaccurate.

But this view, is, I think, inaccurate, because it does not give appropriate consideration to the very great differences which distinguish the present from the past.

Essentially, insofar as the United States is concerned, the recent period of rising business activity, increased production, declining unemployment, rising security markets was caused by artificial stimulants to individual consumption. Deficit financing; the policy of priming the pump; the tax structure, designed to effect—in fact, it accomplished—a distribution of income into the hands of those who spend it for consumable goods; a movement, supported by law, to establish wage rates which have no relation to productivity; and perhaps the excessively onerous liabilities under the securities act, have all had the effect, on the one hand, of increasing individual expenditures for what may generally be termed consumers' goods, and on the other, of reducing the expenditure of savings for capital investment in productive enterprise. The indices of production, broken down into their respective parts, and the absence of new capital issues, bear uncontrovertible evidence to support this conclusion. At the same time that the Federal Reserve Board index of industrial production was approximately as high as it was at its peak in 1929, the dollar value of contracts awarded for construction of all types—public as well as private—was but one-third of what it was in 1928.

Inflationary Recovery.

Thus, we enjoyed the most delicate sort of an inflationary recovery, confined, not wholly, to be sure, but nevertheless very largely, to the industries which produce articles which are more or less speedily consumed.

This recovery was destined and proved to be extremely vulnerable. A series of maladjustments developed. Some of them appeared in the early winter of 1937. Rising costs and prices, largely caused by political action, unaccompanied by an increase in public spending and a greater investment of private capital, had the effect of reducing the money available for individual consumption, and brought to a halt what at one time seemed to be the beginning of a period of investment in construction.

At the same time, the attempt to remold the composition and thus to change the functions of the Supreme Court was construed in some quarters as a direct attack upon the form of government respected in this Republic since the date of its birth. Indeed, by many it was thought to be, in its implications, an effort to change the fundamentals of the American social and economic structure.

Fundamental Causes.

When the philosophy which was implicit in the sit-down strikes was not rejected by the Administration, these suspicions grew. Here, it seems to me, are the fundamental causes of the present recession.

But more than this, the recession is occurring in an environment wholly unique in modern experience. Thus, the past provides no guide to the significance of present events.

Quotas and tariffs, subsidies and special privileges, depreciation of currencies and exchange restrictions, have had the effect of progressively restricting world markets to national areas.

During the 60 years which preceded the breakdown of 1929 and the universal adoption of a new type of currency management, the world as a whole enjoyed relatively free and open markets. To be sure, they were being slowly impaired by the growth in the United States of that peculiar sort of a subsidy known as a tariff, and by a slow change in the direction of public policy toward protection everywhere in Europe. But by and large, because costs were relatively flexible, because protection had not gone to its recent extremes, because there was a stable, constant international currency, it is safe to say that nationals of one country enjoyed a far greater degree of freedom than they enjoy today to exchange with the nationals of other countries the products of their effort. Even during the postwar period, when the policy of economic nationalism was everywhere gaining support and was carried to foolhardy excesses in public policy here, the volume of foreign lending—effective but temporary palliative though it was—operated to keep broad world markets relatively open.

World Markets Restricted.

Today, however, notwithstanding the persistent, heroic efforts of the Secretary of State, exchange restrictions, in some instances almost brutally imposed—quotas, tariffs, the absence of a world currency—and the dearth of international loans—all together, are having the effect of restricting to narrow national areas the markets which were once world-wide.

This gradual shrinking of markets has been made doubly bad by a slow but steady impairment of the freedom of the purely national markets. In ever-expanding areas of economic activity, here and elsewhere, prices of goods, service, and capital are being fixed—fixed by monopolistic practices—employed by unenlightened industrial management on the one hand, by equally unenlightened labor organizations on the other, and by agents of governments themselves.

Thus the flexibility which formerly encouraged adjustments to new circumstances is becoming progressively more difficult.

During the pre and post war periods, unbalanced as were the budgets of many countries at various periods, the public expenditures of at least a few of the world powers were well under control and in balance with revenues. Today, almost everywhere, public deficit financing is being pursued on an unprecedented peacetime scale. In most cases, indeed, as a very poor and inadequate substitute for the support which formerly was derived from relatively free, broad markets, the public credit is being used as a device for supporting national prosperity.

Vigorous Private Enterprise.

The course of public policy during the whole period since the industrial revolution encouraged a vigorous private enterprise. Indeed, there was but little if any thought of any other sort of enterprise. And what little existed was not persuasive against the strength of the traditional views. It may, I think, be argued with great force that private enterprise was encouraged by public acts to proceed in unfortunate directions, to develop certain practices which give cause for a tempered public distrust, and it may be said too that management personnel accepted certain conclusions which were drawn from false premises. But whether this be true or untrue, the fact remains that the urge of the individual to produce useful goods formerly was not discouraged, if, indeed, it was not actively encouraged. The whole fabric of the political structure was one in which man's creative genius was unrestrained.

To this the course of public policy today presents a striking contrast. The restriction of markets and the impairment of their freedom reduce very greatly the area in which private enterprise may operate. The threat of inflation inherent in the world-wide resort to deficit financing, the uncertainties which arise out of the knowledge that at any moment the standard of value may be arbitrarily changed, and that any one of a vast array of acts may be suddenly taken by personal governments vested with great power, create an atmosphere in which private enterprise hesitates to operate. The prevailing subsidization by direct and indirect public grants of practically every group in society is resulting in what Newton Baker has called "the decay of self-reliance."

Capital Investment Essential.

No matter how vigorous a man may be—no matter how great may be his desire to add to the services and goods available to society—he must be able to obtain the necessary tools and working implements. In any system organized around productive enterprise, the investment of capital—savings made out of goods and services already produced and rendered—is one of the essential implements of production. No house can be built without it; no new enterprise can be started without it; no old enterprise can be renovated without it; no people can be employed without it.

Yet, when viewed as a whole, the structure of taxation in our country has substantially reduced the supply of this very important—indeed, absolutely necessary—implement of enterprise—an implement which must not be confused with bank deposits created by deficit financing.

The point here is not that there should be no income and inheritance taxes, but that the system of taxation should permit and encourage the accumulation of savings and should offer at least some incentive for its employment in the production of the multitude of goods which mankind desires. This, to a great extent, is precisely what our present system of taxation does not do.

And, most important of all, it is the prevailing view, justified by public acts and expressions of high officials, that government regards private enterprise as an evil, dishonest and wholly predatory thing. The very force in society which under appropriate circumstances can provide employment and produce the things which satisfy its wants is viewed as a creature of illegitimate lineage and unholy intent.

Thus the present recession is occurring in an environment wholly foreign to any of which the modern world has knowledge. It is an environment which necessarily has impaired the vigor of private enterprise.

It is an axiom of human experience that men cannot exist without enterprise. The things he needs in life are not dropped from the heavens. They are the result of effort. Governments everywhere in some degree, but here perhaps more than in other democratic countries, have weakened the system of traditional private effort and have not substituted for it a system of vigorous collective effort—perhaps because, among other things, vigorous collective action and democratic proccesses are incompatible. Thus with a private enterprise shorn of its strength on the one hand, and with collective enterprise almost wholly dormant on the other, we cannot escape the conclusion—an exaggeration, of course, but substantially true nevertheless—that there is today no enterprise at all.

If it is permitted to continue, the recession which has begun may well gather momentum as it goes. It may even carry the whole group of democracies in its wake. For in a world as integrated and as disturbed as is the one in which we live, the collapse or disintegration of its greatest market must have very profound consequences everywhere. Hence in the absence of a determined and unmistakable change in the course of public policy, what we are now witnessing may gradually assume the proportions of a world-wide economic depression.

Trend Will Not Be Even.

The trend will not be an even one. Indeed, at intervals there probably will be periods of quite marked recovery. They will, however, only obscure the underlying course and postpone the ultimate day of reckoning.

The peace of Europe today is being mantained, not by respect for treaties, not by the force of reason, not by a "balance of power," but by what may be called a balance of weakness. Neither the democracies, on the one hand, nor the autocracies on the other, are strong enough to engage in a short, sharp and decisive war—the only kind if, indeed, there is any kind at all, out of which a victor may emerge.

An economic recession of serious proportions would, I think, be felt first in the democracies and with greater force, primarily because in them the rigid controls of the autocracies do not and cannot within the framework of democracy exist. And because, too, in some of the autocratic states there has been developed what has been termed a sort of "pagan religion" which inspires men and women to undergo great sacrifices in the name of the state. Thus a serious economic depression would have the effect of further weakening the democracies, relatively strengthening the position of the autocracies and influencing them to be at least far more arrogant than they so far have dared to be.

Accentuate Controversy.

Stated in a different way, a serious economic depression in the democracies of the world will certainly accentuate the intensity of the controversy between the civilization in which men's spirit has been liberated and the civilization in which it has been imprisoned.

These are, I think, the consequences of a continuation of the present policies—policies which, as I have said, weaken the vigor of private enterprise and do not substitute for it, if indeed there is any substitute for it, a vigorous collective enterprise.

The road to vigorous collectivism is long and tedious, paved with social disturbances of great magnitude and intense poverty. It is wholly contrary to the American tradition. It is completely incompatible with our concept of the kind of society in which man may remain free. It is not at all certain that it can ever be attained.

Thus either the vigor of private enterprise must be restored, or there is to be no enterprise whatsoever.

To assume that it cannot be revitalized, that it has lost its strength forever, is to accept the philosophy of despair. This I refuse to do.

Pleads for "Grave Emotions."

And so, though as an individual citizen I have no particular right to do what I am about to do, I trust you will not consider it inappropriate—for what I say springs from very deep feelings—if I make a plea—a plea to businessmen, to members of the Republican Party and to the Administration, that they meet the present "serious occasion with grave emotions."

To hope—I know of none who entertain this hope—that the present recession may continue because perhaps it may throw the present Administration out of office, is to misunderstand completes the seriousness of the present issue. To make use of home petty political question as the vehicle in which an opposition party may ride into power is to misunderstand the gravity of present events. To proceed on the assumption that there is a conspiracy to destroy the present Administration by private encouragement of the recession is to imagine an amount of private power which is wholly nonexistent.

May I suggest that businessmen see the significance of the very courageous efforts which the Secretary of State is making toward the widening of markets; to understand that it is folly of the highest order to expect a world organized to produce and distribute a very vast quantity of goods, to exist with any degree of happiness, prosperity, or freedom, within markets which have been reduced to the narrow limits of national boundaries?

Pain for Certain Groups.

To be sure, the process of enlarging markets may inflict pain on certain groups. But will they not be willing to suppress their own private interests for the benefit of the public welfare? Will they not see that synthetic economic independence attained only—if, indeed, it can be attained at all—by unnatural and costly production of goods, is essentially an impoverishing movement? Will they not see that the freedom which they seek, the stable currency which they demand, are wholly incompatible with the exchange restrictions, the internal regulation of prices and activities which necessarily accompany closed economies? Will they not see that intolerance of racial origins, degredation of religious freedom, decay of intellectual inquiry, are the handmaidens of isolation?

Will they not, if they be doubtful, cast their eyes across the seas and examine there the consequences of exactly this policy?

And may I also suggest that the Republican Party re-examine its traditions? Will it not see that if a subsidy is to be granted to one group, as a matter of ordinary justice it is impossible to withhold subsidies from other groups? Will it not conclude, as, indeed, I think it must conclude, that a nation so subsidized is a nation ultimately controlled and regulated by government itself? Will it not see, as I think it must see, that an important economic treaty of real substance with the other great English speaking nations of the world is today the most practical and effective step which can be taken toward preserving the peace of the world?

No Crime to Admit Error.

May I not say to the members of the Republican Party that it is no crime to confess error; that the only crime is to continue to commit it?

And will not the present Administration divest itself of its suspicions, discard its theory that business is malicious, enterprise dishonest? Will it not recognize that the creation and production of goods for compensation, in the interests of humanity, for which it professes such deep sympathy, is, indeed, a very dignified and honorable profession? Will it not proceed from this point to do those things, difficult though they may perhaps be, which will revitalize this very dignified, honorable and necessary profession?

Will it not, with a show of unquestionable determination and earnestness, demand a modification by the Congress of the tax structure so as to permit of the formation of capital?

Will it not see that private enterprise cannot operate—indeed, that no enterprise can operate vigorously—without this essential implement of production? Will it not see that frozen markets have the effect ultimately of increasing the number of the underprivileged? Will it not see that to establish wage rates which bear no relation whatsoever to productivity, that to establish prices by arbitrary exercise of power whether private or public, is to make a people pay more for the very essentials of subsistence—to reduce the standard of living rather than to raise it?

Policy of Greater Freedom.

Will it not consequently undertake, temperately, perhaps, but undertake nevertheless, to pursue a policy directed toward a greater freedom in the markets for services as well as for goods and capital?

And will not the Administration modify its attitude towards the utility companies? It is not necessary to acquiesce in some of the practices employed by some of the utilities—perhaps by many of the utilities if you wish—during the postwar period. But will it not, without abandoning its criticism of these practices, change its attitude so that this great industry, now prepared, I understand, to spend many hundreds of millions of dollars, with specifications drawn and definite plans drafted, may make the capital investments and create productive employment without thought of reprisal or fear of destruction by the Government itself?

Will not the present Administration continue in its avowed purpose to regain control of expenditures, and, coupled to this purpose, return to the Congress of the United States its legal prerogative—to determine the ways in which public moneys may be expended, and thus by a process of temperate management and wise control bring down the present level of expenditures?

Spending to Delay Reckoning.

To take the opposite course, to resume large spending in an effort to turn this recession, will only put off the day of reckoning and, in the end, will impose exactions far more onerous than those we meet today.

Will not the Administration, in short, by a series of specific acts undertaken in good faith, make it unmistakably clear that it is its purpose to restore the conditions under which enterprise may begin to re-employ the idle? Will it not rekindle that spirit of self-reliance for which Americans everywhere have been famous?

It is not here suggested that there is no room for temperate reform of certain of the practices which have permeated the business world throughout the last 70 years. There are, indeed, reforms which should be made. Not now, perhaps, because the issue between authoritarianism on the one hand and democracy on the other, is far too serious an issue to lose merely for the purpose of making changes which, important though they may be in themselves, are, relatively speaking, unimportant when compared with the great question now confronting civilization.

Temperate Reform Urged.

But if, perchance, the Administration feels that there still are some reforms, will it not follow that old axiom first pronounced, I think, by Talleyrand, who, rascal though he may have been in private life, in some respects was a person of great understanding: "Any reform, to be effective, must be temperate."

Will not the Administration now face the present crisis with that same spirit of kindliness, and conciliation with which Abraham Lincoln faced his second term and with which, had he lived, he would have faced the problem of reconstructing a distressed South?

To deal in suspicion and hatred is to revert to barbarism. To deal in restraint and reason is to be civilized.

This is the challenge of today—to demonstrate that the United States is not as one of the autocrats has put it, one of the "reactionary" and "degenerate democracies," but rather a country of self-disciplined, rational beings wholly competent to face the future with complete confidence and faith in its destiny.

Steel Lawyer Says U. S. Aide Attacks Press

Steubenville, Ohio, Dec. 7 (AP).—Clyde A. Armstrong, attorney for the Weirton Steel Co., charged at the National Labor Relations Board hearing today that Board Attorney Isadore Poller had made "undue reflection on the press."

Poller had accused Armstrong of timing "his remarks very well to meet the afternoon edition of the Herald-Star (Steubenville) that goes to press at 1:30."

Statement "Ridiculous."

John E. Laughlan, also a company attorney, leaped to his feet and declared:

"That's the most ridiculous statement I've ever heard made, and I refuse to sit here and listen to it."

"Isn't that an undue reflection on the press?" Armstrong asked Poller. "Haven't we had enough reflections upon the press in the past 48 hours without adding this? If the press cannot get what it wants for publication then it's high time for American people to protest."

Transcript Asked For.

Spectators applauded.

Poller asserted:

"I want to make it perfectly clear that the labor board has not sought in the slightest to influence the press as to what it should print. The point is, what is Weirton Steel Co. through its agents seeking to do."

The verbal exchange brought into sharp focus for the second time in two days the angle of freedom of the press. Yesterday, Harley W. Barclay, New York editor of Mill and Factory, refused to come here to testify regarding an editorial he had written.

This afternoon's incident came when Poller called Charles P. Armbruster, one of the shorthand reporters on the case, to testify that John D. Ubinger, Pittsburgh public relations firm representative, had asked him for a transcript of part of the proceedings.

Tricycle Landings May Revolutionize Airports and Ships

Dayton, Ohio, Dec. 7 (AP).—American aviation is about ready to set forth on a tricycle landing gear and, in so doing, revolutionize not only the airplane industry but airport planning as well.

Maj. Carl F. Greene, head of the Air Corps' engineering procurement branch, said results of experiments with a three-wheeled landing gear—designed to supplant the orthodox undercarriage—already suggests important changes in airplane design, flight operations and airdrome construction.

Tests showed, he said, that a ship equipped with tricycle gear can be landed with less regard to wind direction than in the case of an airplane equipped with present type of undercarriage.

Thus is suggested elimination of runways for airports and substitution of all-concrete or other hard-surfaced landing fields.

$400,000 Loan Made Resettlement Plant

By the Associated Press.

Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, announced yesterday approval of a $400,000 loan to the Tygarts Valley Association for establishment of a woodworking plant at the Resettlement Homestead near Elkins, W. Va.

Randolph said $250,000 of the loan by the Farm Security Administration would be used for construction of the plant and installation of equipment. The remaining $150,000 was loaned for salaries and other expenses in putting the plant into operation, he said.

Bids for construction of factory buildings will be asked "before Christmas," Randolph said.

Coughlin to Contribute Again to His Old Paper

Detroit, Dec. 7 (AP).—Associates of Father Charles E. Coughlin, now preparing to resume his radio speeches which he canceled following criticism from church superiors, announced tonight he also would resume writing for Social Justice, the newspaper of his National Union for Social Justice which he had sold.

Its buyer, Walter Baertschi, meanwhile offered to return the paper to Father Coughlin.

British Liner Rescues 2 Insurgent Airmen

Valetta, Isle of Malta, Dec. 7 (AP). The British liner Largs Bay rescued the pilot and observer of a Spanish insurgent warplane and landed them at Valetta today after the plane was riddled by antiaircraft fire and sank off Cadiz. The pilot said five other ships disregarded their signals for aid after they were shot down.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Book Review.

THE CIVIL SERVICE ASSEMBLY of the United States and Canada releases a pamphlet which will interest you—if you are a student of the inside operations of the Government. Its title is "Facts and Fallacies About Position-Classification," and its author is Ismar Baruch, chief of the Division of Personnel Classification, Civil Service Commission.

The foreword points how the classification of positions in the United States and Canada has followed a different pattern from that of England. "Critics of the American classification practice have sometimes expressed the belief that the broad and vaguely defined classes of the English system are superior to the narrow and carefully defined ones which characterize the American plan, and that they they permit greater administrative flexibility," says the foreword.

Expression of such views, it is held, is "frequently due to fallacious thinking about 'position-classification' is among the points made by Baruch. He further indicates "that some of the problems faced in State and local jurisdictions are due to rigid laws and rules about personnel procedures other than classification. The correct solution would probably involve the alteration of these laws and rules, rather than a change in the basic structure or character of the classification plan," it was concluded. The pamphlet contains 25 pages, appropriate documentations and a very good picture of Mr. Baruch.

FEDERAL FACTS AND FOLKS: John Miller, of Tariffs, ICC, recently underwent an appendix operation and is recovering nicely . . . Does your office require a good set of transportation maps? The Bureau of Public Roads has prepared a set of large-scale maps of 13 States, including Maryland, which show the highways, rivers, railroads, pipe lines, etc. Free distribution is made to Government offices; others may get them at a nominal charge . . . Was all of this true, as the rumors have it: The lower half of the Library Annex Building is practically complete and can be used. The staff and file of the library have grown to an extent where additional space is absolutely necessary. The librarian suggested that the builder permit the library to move into the new building, little by little, as soon as each room became ready for occupancy. The builder refused unless the building was accepted and a payment made on account.

The disbursing officer of the library refused to make a payment on account until the new building was completed. As a result of the mix-up, it was necessary to construct the temporary building for use until the annex is completed, after which the temporary building will be torn down . . . A. F. G. E. President Stengle calls for a line charge in favor of a real merit system; he thinks the time is ripe and calls upon all faiths, regardless of party, to join in the drive. "The greatest opportunity afforded friends of the civil service in many years is now before us. This is the time for a big push to attain our objective," he says . . . The Civil Service Commission shamed 'em, that's what it did. On November 12 it lent a selected list of newspapers valued copies of the Official Register, with request that these be returned by December 1. On the stipulated date only one had come back. So the commission sent them all a letter, and it shamed 'em, it did. We hear that the books are being returned satisfactorily.

Revenue Gain.

The preliminary report of postal revenues for the month of November revealed a gain of approximately 6 per cent over November a year ago, bringing the accumulative gain for the first five months of the present fiscal year to more than 3 per cent. . . . The Postmaster General also is glad over a letter he received from John D. Biggers, unemployment census administrator, which thanked him for the manner postal employes displayed in the recent unemployment census. Farley replied that in recent years the department has been called upon to perform many non-postal services of national importance. "The manner in which the postal organization handled the veterans' adjusted service bonds and the work they performed in the registration of approximately 33,000,000 people under the social security act entities the personnel of the postal service, from the top to the bottom, to the highest commendation," Farley said.

TWO LONG-TIME EMPLOYES of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing said good-by to their fellows recently when retirement came. They were: Mrs. Bell G. Johnson, 2210 Pennsylvania avenue northwest (counter), 19 years' service, and John W. Boston, 1818 Vernon northwest (head plate handler), 45 years' service

Historic House Moved Nearer to St. John's

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 7 (AP).—The 187-year-old Reverdy Johnson house, which blocked traffic on College avenue since Sunday, was moved from the thoroughfare today and tonight was near the site it will occupy on the St. John's College campus.

Workmen were kept busy all Monday and last night bracing the house, installing new sills and lashing bulging sides. At noon today it was pulled into St. John's street, a block from the site it will occupy.

3 Robbers Take $825 At N. Y. Loan Office

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Three unmasked robbers, two of them armed, locked the assistant manager and a woman cashier of the Ohio Finance Co., on the sixth floor of a midtown office building, just off Fifth avenue, in a closet and fled with $825.

George Brent Divorced By Constance Worth

Los Angeles, Dec. 7 (AP).—Constance Worth, blonde film actress from Australia, won a divorce today from Actor George Brent, who failed in an attempt to annul their Mexican marriage several weeks ago.

Miss Worth testified the Irish actor was sullen and morose during the 35 days they lived together and several times remained away from home, refusing to explain later.

No Form Of Interference.

It may be, as Sumner Welles asserts, that a number of newspapers throughout the United States editorially exaggerated the significance of the recent change in the governmental structure of Brazil. It is good to have his intimation that the adoption of a Fascist label at Rio does not mean any "assimilation of ideologies" emanating from Rome. And there can be no criticism of the reminder that it is wise "to refrain from minding your neighbor's business for him."

But it is possible that the Department of State itself has some responsibility for the newspaper reaction which its Undersecretary now criticizes. Only four months ago that department was proposing to lease some of our obsolete destroyers to the Brazilian government, thereby giving the impression that we were for some unrevealed reason particularly anxious to have that government stay in power. The recent abrogation of the Brazilian constitution aroused the more concern in this country because it followed so closely on this abortive destroyer-leasing proposition.

Mr. Welles now rightly observes that a great advance in Pan-American relations has resulted from "the agreement on the part of each American republic to refrain from any form of interference in the internal affairs of the other American republics." It is unfortunate that the full implications of this agreement were not appreciated at the Department of State before the proposal to lease destroyers to Brazil brought prompt and irritated protests from the Argentine Republic.

Entirely Too Cheap.

Matched against our $37,000,000,000 national debt, the $222,000 Christmas bonus which Congress is presenting to its own members is not an enormous sum. But this raid upon the Treasury by legislators to whom the public is looking for reduced spending and lower taxes makes up in demoralizing intensity what it lacks in the volume of outlay.

As Representative Bacon pointed out, the extra session to date has "accomplished nothing." There are growing indications that the entire session will be frittered away in futile debate on issues not directly related to the present business recession and resulting unemployment. Unless a turn in attitude comes quickly, the only achievement is likely to be another addition to governmental costs.

No wonder, then, that the voting of mileage allowance for trips which, for the most part, will never be taken fills citizens who must pay the bill with deep resentment. Congress does not even know when it will adjourn. Certainly there will not be time for Congressmen obtaining the largest slice of this bonus to return home before the regular session begins on January 3. Yet the House voted 327 to 37 for this dip into the Treasury.

Nero's fiddling is recalled when an extra session of Congress, meeting in a period of emergency, subordinates recovery measures to the greasing of its own palms.

Yugoslav Diplomacy.

In the months that have elapsed since the Italo-Yugoslav treaty of March 25 was signed, many of the fears which this agreement aroused in neighboring lands have been dissipated.

The pact, involving among other things a pledge by Italy to respect Yugoslavia's frontiers, has unquestionably led to a marked easing of tensions between the two countries. It has also been followed by an improvement in Italo-Yugoslav trade. But it has not had the result, anticipated in some quarters, of splitting up the Little Entente and securing the Belgrade goverment's adherence to the Berlin-Rome axis.

The successive meetings of Little Entente statesmen that have occurred since March have revealed Yugoslavia's determination to maintain its links with Czechoslovakia and Rumania as well as with France. These alliances are popular with the Yugoslav people. And that they do not prevent the establishment of friendlier relations with other nations is now being demonstrated.

Premier Stoyadinovitch, of Yugoslavia, who is visiting Italy this week, is in a position to play the role of intermediary between the Little Entente and the other nations of the Danube region. It is reported, for instance, that the Yugoslav premier has raised with Mussolini the subject of a Magyar-Little Entente understanding regarding the treatment of minorities, long a sore point with the Hungarian government.

It is a favorable circumstance that the old tensions between Hungary and her Little Entente neighbors have tended to subside somewhat of late. Perhaps before long now the Budapest government may agree to come into a Danubian trade pact which, more and more, appeals to enlightened statesmen of that region as a way out of present difficulties for all the nations concerned.

It is similarly notable that Yugoslavia, the one Little Entente member which has so far refused to establish diplomatic relations with Russia, has so far resisted the overtures to join the German-Italian-Japanese anti-Comintern agreement. It would seem distinctly to Yugoslavia's interest, as to that of European peace, for Belgrade to keep a foot in both of the great European camps without becoming estranged from either.

The NLRB Assumes Too Much.

When the National Labor Relations Board last week took steps to inquire into the sources of a trade journal article criticizing its policies it was pointed out that the issue of freedom of the press was raised thereby. The issue is given emphasis by disclosures showing that the editor of a country paper in Pennsylvania was last summer subjected to NLRB inquisition.

Congress certainly gave the board the sweeping power "to issue subpenas requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of any evidence that relates to any matter under investigation or in question before the board . . ." But it must have been assumed that this virtually unlimited power would be exercised with discretion in the light of the first constitutional amendment, which forbids Congress to make any law "abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press . . ."

Representatives of the board take the position that freedom of the press is in no way involved in the cases now under discussion. It is true that the board has not proceeded directly against any writer, editor or publication. But in its efforts to prove charges against certain employers it has unquestionably disciplined a small-town editor for what was regarded as a biased editorial.

No doubt some sections of the press have indulged in misrepresentation of the board's activities, and of the cause which it is attempting to promote. In occasional instances employers may have inspired such comments. Certainly some have used prejudiced articles of this sort as propaganda for distribution among their employes. For that "unfair" labor practice they are properly subject to discipline by the NLRB. In carrying out this function, however, the board should be very careful not to give the impression that it regards criticism of its policies as being of itself an offense.

If the record of last summer's hearing at St. Marys, Pa., reflects the board's policy, it actually claims the privilege of inquiring into the source of a newspaper's material, into the authorship of editorials and the factors making commentators think as they do. With a powerful Government agency thus putting representatives of the press on the spot, freedom of expression can scarcely be said to be free from abridgement.

A clear statement of policy from the board ought to be forthcoming. And if this statement does not freely admit the unqualified right of the press to be free from official harassment, amendment of the sweeping powers granted by the labor relations act should be sought immediately.

The Future Of The CCC.

In line with his recommendations to cut down Federal appropriations for highways, President Roosevelt is said to favor a reduction in Civilian Conservation Camp enrollments calculated to effect a saving of $75,000,000. Any such proposal would undoubtedly encounter opposition in Congress. But that is to be expected. Every retrenchment move deprives some group or class of expected benefits. That explains why governmental extravagance is so difficult to curb and why legislators are seemingly unimpressed by the dangers of chronic budgetary deficits.

There are, however, good and bad methods of effecting essential economies. In the present case it would be most unwise to urge cuts in the number of CCC enrollees without offering some intelligent plan for reduction and possibly reorganization of the entire system.

At its last session Congress refused to accede to the President's request to place the CCC on a permanent basis. Its life was extended for only another three years. If its activities are now to be curtailed for economy's sake, it will be an opportune time to raise once again the question of the future of the organization.

The CCC is one New Deal emergency agency that has been almost universally approved. It has provided excellent training for the unemployed youth of the country and the work done has also been useful. Nevertheless, as an emergency agency it has left unsolved many questions that call for definite answers before it is given a permanent status.

Thus some definite policy should be formulated for the selection of young men admitted to the service. That will be increasingly necessary as the numbers enrolled are reduced. The duties assigned to them also should be more carefully defined and related to other governmental activities. With these decisions made, economies could be effected much more easily and with much less danger of demoralizing the organization by arbitrary, unco-ordinated changes.

Taxing Federal Contractors.

The Supreme Court has upheld the right of a State to tax contractors engaged on Federal construction projects. That does not mean, however, that the door has been thrown open to mutual taxation by the States and the Federal Government of official salaries or of public securities.

Under the Constitution, as interpreted in a long series of court decisions, it is well established that the employes of State and local governments are not liable to payment of Federal income taxes. On the other hand, employes of the Federal Government are exempt from payment of State income taxes. Likewise, the Federal Government may not levy taxes upon the public obligations of a State government nor may a State tax Federal evidences of debt.

In the cases just decided the major question at issue concerned the status of the taxed contractors. The majority view was that taxes levied upon gross income of private contractors is a valid exaction which "does not interfere in any substantial way with the performance of Federal functions."

Last spring the Supreme Court ruled that an employe of New York City's municipally-owned water system is not subject to a Federal income tax. At the time it was feared that this decision might be regarded as a precedent for exempting from income taxation thousands of persons employed on State and municipal projects. By a similar method of reasoning the court might, it was believed, hold that thousands of persons employed on new types of Federal projects are exempt from State taxation.

By emphasizing the difference between an independent contractor and a direct employe of a government, the court has now prevented an extension of the principle of tax exemption that would have been extremely serious, especially in view of the large number of public projects being carried on under contracts with private companies.

The Brush case revealed the wide extent of the tax exemption privileges accorded Government officials in undertakings which were once of a private nature. The current decisions indicate that there are limits to the spread of such exemptions. But there is no reason to believe that the court is willing to tolerate efforts of the Federal authorities to tax State officials or State securities, or to permit State taxation of Federal officials and Federal securities. Only a constitutional amendment can eliminate tax exemption privileges of this sort.

Speaking of the immunity from State taxation enjoyed by United States bonds, for example, Chief Justice Hughes said: "Vital considerations are there involved respecting the permanent relations of the Government to investors in its securities and its ability to maintain its credit—consideration which are not found in connection with contracts made from time to time for the services of independent contractors."

New Use For Grammar.

While we should not care to become involved in the recent attack on Mr. Roosevelt by the lady from Columbia University over the quality of the Presidential English, we find there are more advantages to a good, sound knowledge of grammar than those emphasized in the classroom or even by Dr. Aiken herself.

One advantage, apparently, is that of being able to talk back with perfect impunity to a traffic cop. Take, for instance, the case of Miss Margaret Greenberg, of Brooklyn. When a policeman reproached her for blowing her automobile horn too often, Miss Greenberg replied scornfully: "You can go to hell." Of course, the policeman arrested her, but his case against her was grammatically weak.

The erudite Magistrate Rudich undertook to instruct the officer in the distinction between imperative and declarative sentences. Had Miss Greenberg said, "You go to hell," or "To hell with you, Patrolman Fred Schewyer," then the decision might have been different. Then, indeed, Miss Greenberg might have been guilty of unseemly behaviour, as the officer alleged. But as it was Miss Greenberg had merely stated in pure, concise language what everybody knows. Life and its temptations being what they are, the magistrate observed, "it is quite possible that you can go to hell."

And there you are. Mind your moods, tenses, genders, cases, declensions and conjugations, make your verbs agree with your nouns and you may be able to get away with almost anything.

In suit for divorce an Atlanta woman stated she was certain her husband visited a former sweetheart often, because several nights a week he would return home late with powder on his coat. An old flame should be careful with powder.

In North Carolina it's against the law to sell gasoline to a person who is drinking. Oh, well, gasoline is too mild a chaser for the kind of whisky they sell in North Carolina.

Some time ago Cornell deodorized the cabbage, but we still think this country needs a 5c cigar that has a little tobacco in it.

"What would you do if you were to come across a bear in the woods?" asks a naturalist. If he wasn't a mighty fast runner, we'd leave him in the woods.

We're terribly slow on the uptake, but what does a walking delegate do when a sit-down strike is being held?

The Housing Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every day the question of housing becomes more involved and its complication through misguided efforts bedevil us until scarcely anyone knows where we stand on this subject. All we need is a little clear thinking, a definite objective, the initiative and the ingenuity to solve the problem, and enough honest, intelligent men to go ahead.

If we are going to have houses for the poor, have them for the poor, instead of building palaces with hotel accommodations. Incidentally, they are called slum clearance, and then built in many cases on land that always was vacant. The problem is supposed to be one of shelter, but that includes hair dryers, clothes dryers, X-rays, violet rays, dancing and bridge, children's nurses and, I suppose, nurses for the parents, too. Everything is included on the rent except the tax bill.

These houses for the poor are rented to middle-class merchants, successful shopkeepers and master mechanics, who are the very people best able to pay land taxes for city government, while our most dilapidated individuals and houses are squeezed and bled to meet the needs of the budget.

If American ingenuity and business enterprise made an automobile in 1928 for $2,000 and in less than ten years reduced that cost to $900, they should be able to solve the problem of low-rent, taxpaying apartments. Since we find the cost of putting one brick on top of another is excessive, why can we not develop some other process? Modern science has provided us with every conceivable luxury but we are still hindered by archaic methods of construction for the fundamental necessity of life—shelter.

In my opinion the solution of the problem lies in finding some new material for building modern tenements, perhaps some metal that would be cut and finished in sections at the factory by mass production, leaving only a final quick assembly on the lot.

"How Do They Manage It?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A special session of Congress is now being held. The cost to the Government—to the people—is enormous. After its opening, the President went to Florida to catch fish. The Vice President went to Pennsylvania to catch deer. Congress was left to do the business which was considered sufficiently important to occasion a special session.

The other day I visited the Capitol. The House was not in session. In the Senate the farm bill was being discussed. Less than half of the Senators were present. Of those present, some were talking among themselves, some were reading printed matter, some were coming and going, and a very few were listening to those who spoke.

I assume that these officials and members of Congress are faithfully performing the duties for which they were elected, and for which they draw salary; and that without having heard the pros and cons regarding the bill on which they are to vote, the Senators will know how to cast their ballots. But will you kindly explain, in your valued paper, to those of us who are not acquainted with the way things are done on Capitol Hill, how they manage it? A. J. BALCUM.

War Toys.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

A woman mourns her losses
In shattered old Madrid,
While children play a war game
Because their fathers did.

Quoted from a recently published series of rhymed comments on news pictures because in it lies a law of child psychology. Children usually play at what they've seen their elders doing or hear them talking about. Another law of psychology is that whatever makes an impression on the sensitive child's spirit, is later expressed in behavior or action in adult life.

One way to perpetuate the war spirit is to give children war toys; another way is to talk war—not peace and good will.

This is an appeal to parents to avoid war toys and substitute for them toys related to constructive activities or humorous entertainment, and also to interest children in practical aspects of the brotherhood of men, thus preparing the minds of the coming generation to concentrate on problems having to do with a square deal for all nations. Philippine Independence.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Former Senator Harry B. Hawes is reported as having made the statement upon arrival in San Francisco from a recent trip to Manila that "Filipinos do not wish immediate independence" because they "fear Japanese occupation after full independence."

The Philippine Commonwealth is definitely committed by the will of the Filipino people, expressed in the manner provided in the independence act, to the proposition of complete independence for the islands. Philippine sugar interests represented here by former Senator Hawes since relinquishing his seat in the United States Senate are opposed to independence at any time because they wish the continuation of duty-free entry of Philippine sugar into the very profitable American market.

Confusion Over Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The greedy, the ignorant, the wise guys, super-patriots, war fanatics, ax grinders and what have you have all got our peace situation into such a mess that it makes the Biblical Tower of Babel's confusion of tongues look like a pin prick on an elephant.

Boiled down and in the last analysis it is a fight between the war profiteers and the humanitarians: war business against lives; and our 20 years of peace history proves it. So you boys are forced to band together and protect yourselves. It is clear that no one else is going to do it for you; for all our so-called best minds have accomplished so far is disagreement. A. Jefferson Library?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The talk of changing the name of the Library of Congress is sheer nonsense.

Any town, city or rural community, ocean to ocean, Canada to Mexico, can have, at will, a "Thomas Jefferson" Library. There is but one Library of Congress possible in these United States, the one and only that can ever be—the glorious one here in Washington across the great green, tree-splendored park from the Capitol! Birthday Letters To The Post

My Dear Mr. Meyer: I intended writing you before your anniversary date but as usual time crept up on me and caught me unawares.

Let me now, however, offer you my sincere congratulations on the lusty health of The Post as it reaches its sixtieth birthday and on the very well done anniversary number.

I have been a Post reader for all the years of its life, with profit to myself, and I wish for you and The Post a full continuing success.

You have great reason for pride in your accomplishments since you took over the guidance of the property. FRANK B. NOYES.
Washington, Dec. 6.

Dear Mr. Meyer: My congratulations to you and your newspaper, on the occasion of its sixtieth anniversary, should be divided into two parts.

First: as a former newspaper publisher, let me congratulate you on the paper as a whole. Second: as president of the Washington Community Chest, I wish you to know how deeply we appreciate the wholehearted manner in which The Post, each year, has bent every effort to assist in the annual Community Chest campaign.

In both respects, The Washington Post has fulfilled all requirements of the newspaper that would truly serve the community in which and for which it stands.
CLARENCE PHELPS DODGE,
President of the Community Chest.
Washington, Dec. 6.

My Dear Mr. Meyer: On this day of the celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of your distinguished newspaper, I beg you to accept my sincere and good wishes.

Since my brief residence in the Capital, I have observed with much pleasure and gladness your dignified presentation of the daily news. The noted services of your newspaper may well be an example of the virtues of sound journalism.

May your readers and well-wishers be the beneficiaries of your continued achievements and may The Post ever remain a symbol of responsibilities of a free press. C. C. SHIFFELER.
General Manager, the Raleigh Hotel.
December 6, 193[illegible].

Dear Mr. Meyer: From about 9 o'clock last night until very late Monday morning I read The Washington Post's sixtieth anniversary edition and will continue the reading later. It has been a long time since I found anything so interesting. I congratulate you on the fine edition.

I am, as you know, a Washington Post rooter. When I had my first newspaper job in Texas 31 years ago I started reading The Post. Our little staff all had ambitions for a newspaper career and we all had our favorite newspapers. Some liked the New York World, New York Herald, New York Times and Chicago Inter-Ocean. My favorite was The Washington Post. I dreamed of working on it, an ambition which I achieved more than a quarter of a century ago.

Since I first began to read The Post it has been a good newspaper, except for one short period. It is a great newspaper now and I am proud of it and proud to have once been a member of its staff.

I congratulate you on the fine anniversary edition and even more I congratulate you on the fine job you do consistently from day to day. B. N. TIMMONS.
Washington, Dec. 6.

My Dear Mr. Meyer: Permit me to extend to you most cordial congratulations on the occasion of the sixtieth anniversary of The Washington Post.

You are doing a great service to our country in making The Post one of the leading journals in the United States and I feel that we all owe you a deep sense of obligation. L. S. ROWE, Director General, Pan American Union.

Bar Exam.

THE stores are breaking out their Christmas bunting, "Mail Early" signs adorn the post-office, and the red and green traffic lights twinkle with a new and festive significance. The Yule spirit permeates and gladdens all—except the 800-odd persons who will take the District bar examination this month.

As one who took the examination a year ago I can understand and sympathize with these. And the sympathy goes as well to their friends and relatives—the wives who tip-toe softly around the apartment and supply countless pots of strong coffee while the last-minute cramming is being done.

There are two distinct types of cramming for the bar—individualistic and gregarious. Devotees of the former method thumb notebooks accumulated through the years of law school, and endeavor to recapture, in 1937, the sense of obscure and somniferous lectures dating back to 1934. Since the notes of no two persons ever agree, this type of study must be done alone if progress is to be made.

Group crammers, on the other hand, despair of learning more from the review of a course than was learned at the first exposure. And what they learned then they are sure would not be enough for the bar. In their doubt they turn to anyone who speaks with assurance. A positive statement, regardless of whom from, is seized upon with avidity.

For these, Washington offers several highly competitive bar review courses which present excellent and comprehensive instruction with a race-track technique. Even the tuition has a sporting angle—one can either pay $25 outright for the course, or $10 down and $40 more if he passes the bar.

Throughout the course, like a tout boosting his own tips, the instructor hints of a priceless dope sheet to be furnished the last day. It is compiled, he explains, by a deep study of the past performances of the bar examiners and the recent court decisions. And it contains the answers to about 50 questions that may be asked.

* * * *

To save others from my own experience, I should say now that one is permitted to use a typewriter. I was told this only the night before the examination. But my elation was short-lived, for my informant explained that tables had to be furnished by the candidates.

This was a problem. While others slept that night, I was routing out my friends in a desperate search for a suitable table. At last, I decided to use a kitchen stool which was just large enough to hold my machine. And, so as to have room for my paper, I carefully tied a checkerboard to the stool's top.

The next morning I staggered into the impressive, oak-finished room where the examination was held, carrying a typewriter and an enameled kitchen stool with checkerboard attachment. And the room was filled with tables, supplied by a company which rented both machines and tables. I put the stool in a corner out of sight.

But the spectacle caused no comment. The candidates just weren't noticing things. A few stood at the door of the building smoking. Others wandered around looking vacantly at the many pictures of judges and professors that adorned the walls. And the veterans, those up for the third or fourth time, greeted the newcomers with the grim joke that their second try would only cost $15 instead of the $25 that the first attempt cost.

* * * *

The candidates who used typewriters were separated from the others. Long before the questions were distributed, the nervous ones sat at their machines trying to limber up their fingers. One could almost detect the rhythm of "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party" in their practice.

As the questions were distributed there was a deep silence, broken only by the jerky clicking of a single candidate numbering his pages. Soon came a hopeful, sustained typing, as the first adventurous soul launched on an answer. Then came a roar as the whole group lit into the questions.

About half an hour after the writing started, the examiner who gave the first test came in. He waved for silence. Cordially he greeted us, and tried to give what encouragement he could. He explained the few rules of the examination. There would be six papers, one each morning and one each afternoon for three days. A total of 420 points of a possible 600 was needed, falling below 70 on not more than two of the papers. He then bade us be of good cheer and walked away.

Though permitted to leave the room, we were warned against talking outside. This was a futile requirement. No one felt like talking. Old schoolmates would meet in the washroom or on the stairs and pass each other without nodding, like pre-occupied ghosts.

And during the noon hour, between examinations, when all were free to talk, there was very little said. Occasionally two candidates would argue over a question. Or the students of different review courses would get together and compare their dope sheets and try and figure which came the closer to the questions asked that morning.

But most of the candidates were silent. They just stood brooding and staring moodily into the infinite. STANLEY DISNEY.

Meet The Ex-Wife.

ERNEST SIMPSON, of London, the former husband of Dorothea Parsons Simpson and of the Duchess of Windsor, the former wife of Commander Earl Winfield Spencer, U. S. N., the former husband of Mrs. Norma Reese Johnson Spencer, has married Mrs. Mary Kirk Raffray, the former wife of Jacques Achille Louis Raffray, who has married Mrs. Connie De Bower, the former wife of Herbert De Bower.

PEGLER.

Mr. De Bower is the former husband of the wife of the former husband of both Dorothea Parsons Simpson and the Duke of Windsor's wife, the former wife of the former husband of Mrs. Miriam J. Spencer, the husband of Mrs. Norma Reese Johnson Spencer.

Or, to put it otherwise, the Duke of Windsor's wife is the former wife of the husband of the former wife of the husband of the former wife of Mr. De Bower and four to carry. Or, still otherwise, the former wife of the husband of Mr. De Bower's former wife is the wife of the former husband of the Duke of Windsor's wife, the former wife of the former husband of the former wife of the husband of the present Mrs. Spencer and carry one.

• • • •

OR, PERHAPS, more simply, Mrs. Dorothea Parsons Simpson is the former wife of the husband of the former wife of the husband of the former wife of Mr. De Bower and, by the same process, is former wife of the former husband of the Duke of Windsor's wife, the former wife of the former husband of Mrs. Miriam J. Spencer.

Water won't quench fire; fire won't burn stick; stick won't beat dog; dog won't bite pig; pig won't climb over the stile and the old lady cannot get home tonight.

Mr. Raffray is the former husband of the wife of the former husband of the former wife of the former husband of Mrs. Miriam J. Spencer, the former wife of the former husband of the Duke of Windsor's wife, the former wife of Mr. Raffray's own former wife's husband, former husband of Dorothea Parsons Simpson, and is himself the husband of the former wife of Mr. De Bower, whose present status is that of former husband.

Take one blue bottle from 99 blue bottles, leaving 98 blue bottles hanging on the wall; take 1 blue bottle from 98 blue bottles, leaving 97 blue bottles hanging on the wall; take 1 blue bottle from 97 blue bottles, leaving 96 blue bottles hanging on the wall.

AT A FORMAL dinner party a punctilious hostess would have an interesting problem seating all her guests in such a manner that no former husband should be placed next to either his present or former wife nor any guest next to the present husband or wife of his or her former spouse.

Eleven guests present a seating problem, anyway, and it would be necessary to place the present Mrs. Raffray next to the former Mrs. Spencer. The Duke could be seated between the present Mrs. Spencer and Mrs. Dorothea Parsons Simpson. Commander Spencer would be at the left of Mrs. Dorothea Parsons Simpson, with the present Mrs. Simpson on his left and Mr. De Bower on her left and the Duchess to the left of him. (This is a circular table.)

Then comes Mr. Raffray, then the former Mrs. Spencer, then the present Mrs. Raffray and finally Mr. Simpson. He would be only one place removed from the Duke, and the Duchess would be next to the former husband of the present wife of one of her former husbands. Mr. De Bower would be on the left of Mrs. Simpson, the former wife of his former husband.

This is genteel company, and there need be no embarrassment over this proximity, although it might be advisable in the entertainment after dinner to avoid the game of musical chairs, which might result in confusion.

It has been estimated that if marriage and divorce were extended in the same ratio to the entire civilized population for a few generations and each marriage resulted in at least two children, the world would be just one great, big, happy family.

Meet the former wife.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Winter Golfer's Worries.

Joe Goggle's firm went broke last week—
The failure wiped him out;
His wife she left him for a sheik;
He's got a touch of gout;
His peace of mind has been knocked flat
By heavy stress and storm,
But what makes him downhearted's that
He's off his golfing form!

II.

The sheik who stole his wife away
Was quite a trusted friend;
They simply left a note to say
"Good-by. This is the end."
She took his savings, nearly ten
Cool thousand dollars, but He's only heard complaining when
He's missed an easy "putt!"

III.

His house was razed last month by fire;
They didn't save a thing;
It still is smoldering.
His troubles come not two by two,
They come by fours and fives,
But what makes Goggle feel so blue
Is that he dubs his "drives!"

IV.

The income tax men came today
And made him pay a fine
Because of what he failed to say
They talked of sending him to jail—
His back is to the wall;
But what makes him so loudly wail
Is that he "hooks" the ball.

V.

His father died not long ago
And cut him from his will;
It was a most distressing blow—
The rebuff hurts him still.
He now is minus wife and job,
But this does not suffice—
The thing that makes poor Goggle sob
Is that he's prone to "slice!"

VI.

Misfortunes great has Goggle had;
Tough breaks have been his lot—
His home life has been more than sad,
His future's gone to pot;
But all that breaks his heart is this—
(It makes him groan and curse)
As awful as his "long game" is
His "short game" is much worse!

Harvard's Handicap.

A Harvard instructor can, by pouring salt water into one ear, inserting a wire into it and attaching the other end (of the wire, not the ear) to his leg, receive radio programs. This is one of the reasons why so many fathers send their sons to Yale and Princeton instead.

The Sportsman.

"War is the quintessence of beauty," says one of Mussolini's sons in a book. Describing an aerial bombardment of Ethiopian Galla cavalry, he writes, "We arrived upon them unobserved and immediately dropped our load of explosives. I remember that one group gave me the impression of a budding rose as the bombs fell in their midst. It was exceptionally good fun."

Government Victory in British Columbia By-Election Seen As Repudiation Of Economic Nationalism.

By Our Ottawa Correspondent.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Ottawa.

PREMIER MACKENZIE KING is now enjoying a holiday in Florida in order to fit himself for the labors of the coming parliamentary session which will open toward the end of January. Dr. O. D. Skelton, the Deputy Minister of External Affairs, who has for years been the premier's trusted adviser about trade treaties and international affairs, is also off duty in the process of recovering from a severe illness. But their absence from Ottawa does not mean that the negotiations about the new trade agreement with the United States will be at a standstill Mr. Dunning, the Minister of Finance, who as the author of the annual budget has a large say in tariff policy, will be on the job and Mr. Euler, the Minister of Trade and Commerce, has postponed a trip which he had planned to Cuba in order to assist in the negotiations.

The same trio of civil servants who assisted Premier King in negotiating the existing agreement in 1935, Mr. Norman Robertson, of the Department of External Affairs; Mr. Hector B. Mackinnon, the tariff expert of the Ministry of Finance, and Mr. L. D. Wilgress, head of the intelligence service of the Department of Trade and Commerce, have again been called upon to do the spade work for the new pact. The ultimate decision about the American contribution to the pact will be made in Washington, but a good deal of preliminary work here will fall upon the shoulders of the American Minister, Mr. Norman Armour, and his staff.

The United States has, on the whole, been fortunate in its diplomatic representatives at Ottawa, but none of his three predecessors has been so universally popular as Mr. Armour. The grandson of a Scot who emigrated to Chicago nearly a century ago, his retention of many Scottish characteristics and his knowledge of Scottish lore have won him widespread affection and good will in a country which contains more people of Scottish blood than any other community outside of Scotland. Last week he delighted the Scots of Winnipeg by an admirable address which he delivered at their annual St. Andrew's banquet on November 30. He is on good terms with all the Ministers and prominent officials and has also pleasant relations with the leaders of the opposition.

In such discussions as take place at Ottawa a watching brief will be held for the British government by Sir Francis Floud, the British high commissioner, who before he was appointed to his present office, held a series of high posts at Whitehall. He has just gone home on leave to England and will have an opportunity of obtaining at first hand the views of the British government about the tariff concessions which they would like to secure from Canada to facilitate the Anglo-American treaty.

Government Candidate Wins By-Election.

BEFORE Premier King started south for his holiday he had the satisfaction of knowing that his government's candidate had on November 29 won a by-election in the Federal division of Victoria in British Columbia. This division, the bulk of whose voters live in Victoria, the capital of the province, has been traditionally a safe Conservative seat, no Liberal having carried it since 1906, and it had become vacant through the death of Dr. Tolmie, a Conservative former Minister, who had been elected by a small majority of 90 in a three-cornered contest.

On this occasion three candidates, a Liberal, a Conservative and a nominee of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, stood and the outcome of the polls was that Mr. Mayhew, the Liberal, was returned by a majority of nearly 1,800 over his nearest opponent, the Conservative. The Conservatives did their best to make the government's trade policy the dominant issue of the election. The Conservative candidate made the preservation of the trade preferences in the British market, which have been so beneficial to the lumber and other interests of British Columbia, the chief plank in his platform, and his leader, Mr. Bennett, journeyed specially to Victoria to make a speech on his behalf. In this speech he protested vigorously against any sacrifice of Canadian interests to placate the United States, and declared that the by-election was merely the opening round of a great campaign which his party proposed to wage against the iniquitous schemes now afoot for making Canada pay most of the price demanded for an Anglo-American rapprochement.

The federal government as well as the provincial ministry of British Columbia employed all their electioneering resources to capture the seat, and two Ministers, Messrs. Mackenzie and Gardiner, were sent from Ottawa to take charge of the campaign. They gave assurances that in the trade negotiations the interests of British Columbia would be fully safeguarded and also bent their efforts with considerable success to diverting public attention to defense policy. They pointed out that the government was now spending large sums in improving the defenses of Vancouver Island and the Pacific Coast in general, and left, as Mr. Bennett afterward complained, the thinly veiled implication in their speeches that if the voters did not indorse the defense program by returning the government candidate, they could not expect much more money to be spent on defense in this particular locality. And in view of the apprehensions which have been aroused in British Columbia by the bellicose activities of Japan, such an appeal could hardly have failed to be successful.

Defense Issue Raised By Liberal Candidate.

HOWEVER, the Conservatives had pinned their faith on the trade issue and, when the result was known Mr. Mackenzie King felt justified in claiming that it was an unmistakable answer to Mr. Bennett and an emphatic indorsement of the trade and other policies of his ministry. He also insisted that it was an indication of the general sentiment of the Canadian people and their desire to be done with both economic nationalism and economic imperialism.

The Liberals are entitled to considerable jubilation over the capture of a Conservative stronghold, but any appraisal of the result must be qualified by the fact that the ministerial candidate was returned by a minority vote as the combined vote of the Conservative and C. C. F. candidates was almost 50 per cent greater than the Liberal total. The Conservatives by way of excusing their defeat say that the time was too short for an adequate discussion of the trade issue and also that they were handicapped by having a candidate who at one time had offended many people by heading a movement to separate Vancouver Island from the rest of British Columbia and reduce it to the status of a crown colony, directly dependent upon Britain. However, the Conservative critics of Mr. Bennett, who grow in number, see in the result another proof of the ineffectiveness of his leadership, and the Montreal Gazette has seized upon the occasion to renew its campaign for a change in the party's leadership and a new program.

Meanwhile there has been another interesting test of public sentiment in Alberta through a by-election in the division containing Lethbridge, the third largest city in the province. In 1935 a Social Credit candidate, who lately resigned, won in a four-cornered race. But the candidate, who was nominated in his place on the Social Credit ticket, although he also had labor backing, went down to defeat by 3,980 to 3,210 at the hands of a popular pioneer doctor who had the joint indorsement of the Liberals, the Conservatives, the United Farmers and a body known as the People's League of Alberta.

Aberhart's Goose Is Not Yet Cooked.

THE RESULT, which was the first real test of the popularity of the Aberhart government since it was elected in 1935, has greatly heartened its opponents and caused much joy in financial circles in eastern Canada, where it is being interpreted as indicating that the voters of Alberta are recovering their sanity and are just waiting for a chance to make a summary end of the Aberhart ministry and its wild experiments in monetary policy.

But here again too much stress should not be laid upon this one by-election, as the anti-Aberhart candidate had the benefit of a vigorous campaign by the only local paper, the Lethbridge Herald, which is ably edited.

The Conservatives, the United Farmers and most of the leaders of the People's League want a complete fusion of the oppositionists under a new leader who is to be selected, but the Liberals think that they have a chance of getting control of the province. So while they are willing to co-operate with the other parties against Premier Aberhart, they have rejected the proposal for a complete fusion and insist that the separate identity of the Liberal Party must be preserved.

Ambassador Dodd's New Work.

THE FIRST VOLUME of the proposed history of the colonial South by the professor of history who is now our Ambassador to Germany has neither the virtues nor the defects of Prof. Charles M. Andrews' work in the same field.

Ambassador Dodd, a distinguished scholar with precise convictions and excellent powers of expression, tells of the planting of English culture in Virginia, Maryland and the Carolinas. His book has a clarifying purpose—to explain how the democratic ideals of seventeenth-century English radicals found actuality in America.

The book is comprehensive. A brilliant introductory chapter describes the soil and climate of the South. The narrative of political events does not preclude proper attention to the economic setting. The description of the culture of tobacco is interesting; social life, too, is charmingly treated. An engaging chapter entitled "A Coherent Social Order" portrays the legal, religious and social customs of the settlers on the shores of the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries.

• • • •

NOR IS AMBASSADOR DODD so heavily sociological as to neglect the traditional obligation of the historian to be eventful. There are moving passages and vivid descriptions of individuals. The book's vivaciousness should attract casual readers who would be repelled by the tedium of thorough research.

But, as has been hinted, the book is almost devoid of the scholarly virtues exemplified by Prof. Andrews. Dodd's reputation as a leading authority on the antebellum South is not likely to be supplemented by a reputation for knowledge of the colonial South. His researches into the history of the colonial South have been too superficial to lead to the discovery of new facts.

Such exploited authorities as Philip Alexander Bruce and Alexander Brown are heavily drawn upon to the neglect of other historians and of important original documents. Some of the investigations were done in the spare moments of a busy official far removed from the scene of his descriptions. Prof. D. D. Wallace is mentioned in the preface without even a footnote reference to his recent history of South Carolina. Perhaps our busy Ambassador and absentee historian never heard of this monumental work!

• • • •

POVERTY OF RESEARCH is accompanied by unoriginality of interpretation. Following the example of journalists who have turned to history for a livelihood, an academic scholar reads concepts of the present and the very recent past into the behavior of our most remote colonial ancestors.

Ambassador Dodd is a good Democrat whose unhappy residence on the continent of dictators has served to renew his faith in what he considers the American way of life. This he interprets idealistically rather than realistically, supposing it to be embodied in the teachings of Jefferson and Woodrow Wilson, and perhaps Franklin D. Roosevelt.

As a historian Dodd naturally assumes the duty of giving this concept ancient lineage. He finds in the Southern colonies during their first century the origins of popular government, religious freedom and the ideology of the liberal Democrat.

• • • •

THERE IS LITTLE OR NO appreciation of seventeenth-century persons who are acknowledged to have seen events in the light of their own times. The shade of so prejudiced a historian as Macaulay is invoked to condemn the Stuart kings and their age. The heroes of this book were able to envision, at least in the imagination of the author, the attitudes he happens to cherish 300 years later. No attempt is made to analyze with truly modern realism the sort of democracy and liberalism practiced in the seventeenth century. The threadbare romanticism of Macaulay, Bancroft, Fiske and their hundred imitators is merely brought up to date.

• • • •

AMBASSADOR DODD should have given more than a fugitive glance to Andrews' dull but informing work, which has already progressed to three volumes, with several more promised. It is marvelously uninteresting. The emotions of Englishmen settling in the American wilderness are neglected in favor of an almost endless digest of legal documents. The reader is almost asked to believe that the main concern of early Americans was disputes over lands and charter and proprietary rights. Moreover, the book lacks unity and comprehensiveness. Principles proclaimed in the prefaces are forgotten in the pursuit of petty details revealed by industrious research, and many important matters are not mentioned.

Nevertheless, the book possesses cardinal merits. The author eschews the temptation to which nearly all students of colonial history succumb—the reading into events of that period concepts of democracy, revolution and liberty current a hundred or more years later. He actually interprets seventeenth-century America in terms of the England and America of that time.

• • • •

FROM ANDREWS Ambassador Dodd could have learned why the Age of Restoration "cannot be denominated corrupt or degenerate," and that a work "concerned solely with those features that anticipated the formation of our great republic" is in a vital sense "isolated and provincial."

WE ARE INDEBTED to Mr. Bennet A. Cerf, of Random House, for another anecdote about William Faulkner . . . It appears that on the last day of his recent visit to New York Mr. Faulkner was to have been guest of honor at a fashionable dinner party . . . The hostess, delighted to have lassoed such a lion, called for him in her Rolls-Royce . . . "As the car slithered majestically through the Fifth avenue traffic," reports Mr. Cerf, "Bill suddenly clutched the lady's wrap and announced: "Ma'am, I believe I am going to be sick." . . . And, says Mr. Cerf, "he was sick."

IF YOU WERE, by any chance, thinking of trying to get an autograph out of John Steinbeck, author of "Of Mice and Men," better give it up . . . Steinbeck, according to Mr. George Joel, of Covici Friede, is beyond reach of the United States mails . . . And how do you like that, Mr. Farley?

• • • •

• • • •

SPEAKING OF THE MAILS, Mr. F. Gilbert Blakeslee, of California, has sent us a curious and interesting volume called "Postal Uniforms of The World" . . . It does not include Turkey, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, the Bahamas or Panama, because those places do not have any uniformed postmen . . . Nor does it include British North Borneo, because there are no postmen there at all.

• • • •

OF ALL THE UNIFORMS meticulously described by Mr. Blakeslee, we think we like best that worn by the postmen in Northern Rhodesia—"red fez with black tassel, red shirt without buttons, having short sleeves and worn over shorts; legs and feet are bare."

• • • •

MR. BLAKESLEE, we learn, also is author of "Police Uniforms of the World" . . . In time, we trust, he will get around to movie ushers.

JUST AS WE WERE REPORTING the determination of the Columbia University Press' proofreaders to fight to the last bit of lead in the hell-box for "Shakspere" against "Shakespeare," comes a communication from that organization spelling it "Shakespere." . . . It looks as though half the proofroom, anyhow, has gone over to the enemy.

• • • •

WE HEAR that Miss Katherine Maule has left Doubleday, Doran for the advertising and publicity department of Stokes . . . Also that Miss Eunice Blake has left Nelson & Sons to become head of the juvenile department at Oxford University Press.

THE ERUDITE AUSTRALIAN, Helen Simpson, whose new novel, "Under Capricorn" (Macmillan), is coming out next February, is shortly to lecture at the Sorbonne on thirteenth century cookery . . . While she is on the subject we hope she will elucidate what was probably a very significant point made by Mr. Belloc in one of his recent books . . . In the thirteenth century, said Mr Belloc, "there were no potatoes and there were no suicides." . . . Maybe Mr. Belloc was thinking of Potatoes O'Brien.

Tom McCarthy

Santa Claus Has A Good Time.

"I BING-BANG with them all the time," Santa Claus said. "You see I'm not a 'squat' Santy. I'm a gabby one. I give them as good as they send.

"The trouble with some of these department store Santa Clauses," Santa told me, "is that they're the 'squat' type. They sit down all day, and just answer, 'Yes,' or 'No.' I gab with the kids. That's what they like."

McCARTHY.

Capt. Harry Bede who is acting as a department store Santa in one of the downtown department stores should know what the kids like. He's been a Santa Claus for 18 winters, and a clown for 35 years.

"I was born into show business," Capt. Bede told me. "I was born under a circus tent in Waterloo, Iowa. My father before me was a clown. He started with the one and only P. T. Barnum."

Right now, the Capt. has an animal act in vaudeville. He is the possessor of what he claims is the only full blooded Siberian bloodhound in the United States. But every year when Christmas draws near, he heads into a department store to play Santa Claus.

"I've been a Santa Claus for 18 years," he told me. "But I always play a different town."

Capt. Bede speaks of his Santa Claus impersonations as "engagements." He tells you how he "opened" here in Washington on November 13. It's all part of show business to Capt. Bede.

• • • •

"WASHINGTON KIDS," Capt. Bede told me, "are polite kids. It's a pleasure to deal with them. All kids aren't like that. I know. I've worked from Chicago to Bridgeport, Conn. And the kids in New York City are the toughest.

"Down here when you ask the kids a question they answer, 'Yes, sir,' and 'No, sir.' In New York they're really tough.

"What would you like for Christmas, my little man, I'd ask those New York kids. They'd reply with, 'Ah, I dunno.'

"Would you like a nice bicycle? I'd ask them. And they'd reply to that, 'O. K., if that's the best you can do.'

"Honest," Capt. Bede told me, "those kids in New York would take all the fun out of playing Santa Claus."

• • • •

ABOUT THAT TIME, Capt. Bede—or Santa Claus—began stroking his whiskers. Some children were approaching.

"Get a load of this," Santa said, as two little girls in green approached.

"Are you little girls twins?" Santa asked.

"Uh-huh," the little girls said.

"How old are you?" he asked.

"I'm three," one of the twins replied.

"I'm four," the other one said.

"And you're twins," Santa repeated.

"Uh-huh," they said.

• • • •

WHEN THE TWINS had gone, Santa loosened up a bit.

"Boy, I get some funny answers on this job. You know, I always ask the kids if they eat their spinach, and drink their milk. The other day I asked a little girl if she always drank her milk.

"'Sure,' she said, 'unless pa drinks it first.'

"I'm still trying to figure that one out," Santa said.

"But sometimes it's not so funny. A little girl was in the other day and I asked her if she ate all her meals.

"'What do you mean, Santa?' she said.

"Do you eat all your food, and clean your plate so you'll be a big healthy girl? I asked her," Santa said.

"'Sometimes, Santa,' she said. 'But sometimes we don't get all our meals.'

"She wanted some shoes for Christmas," Santa told me. "And when she told me what she wanted I felt like crying." Capt. Bede, make-up and all, looked sort of sad when he told the story.

"But sometimes we have our fun," he said. "This job keeps you on your toes. Sometimes they come over here just after talking with the Santa Claus in some other store.

"And when I ask them what they want for Christmas, they tell me I ought to know, because they just told me. It's cases like that which require tact.

"Usually, I tell them that I remember just what they told me. So far," Capt. Bede said, "they haven't cross-questioned me."

"Do you enjoy this job?" I asked Santa Claus—or Capt. Bede.

"I'll say I do," he said. "Besides the kids being more polite in this town, I'm having a lot of fun right on the job. Look."

Santa Claus went over and mounted a tricycle. Pedaling furiously he swept out into the main section of toyland. His beard trailing in the wind, he swept precariously around the corners of counters, and came racing down the aisle as though he were battling a dead heat.

Behind him excited youngsters giggled and clapped their hands. And, when he swung off the tricycle, sweat beaded his brow.

"Am I having a good time?" he said. "I'll say I am. "I raise hell around here," Santa Claus said.

McMahon Seated For Renomination

An early favorable report on Judge John P. McMahon for renomination to the District Police Court was forecast yesterday after a brief hearing by a sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Two women appeared as complainants against Judge McMahon because of the handling of a case, but the sub-committee appeared satisfied with McMahon's explanation. Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman, said a report would be filed as soon as a meeting could be held with Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who was absent from the hearing.

Va. Woman Acquitted In Son-in-Law's Death

Salem, Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—Mrs. Louetha Clifton, 43, of Dundee, was acquitted of a charge she murdered her son-in-law, John J. McGarrigle, 35, by a Roanoke County Circuit Court jury this afternoon.

The woman was accused of slaying McGarrigle October 9, when he came to her home in a taxi seeking his wife, Mrs. Clifton's daughter by a former marriage, who had fled to her mother's home after an alleged beating by the former soldier three days previous.

Defense counsel claimed Mrs. Clifton acted within her rights in protecting her home.

Soviet Chiefs Urge Big Vote To Prove Unity

Election Held 'Mobilization' With 'War Nearer Than Ever.'

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Dec. 7.—Campaign statements by high Soviet sources tonight urged the people in regard Sunday's election of the Supreme Soviet as a "mobilization" to show the world the nation is united.

Marshal Semion Budenny, commander of the Moscow military zone, warned a political rally that it was necessary to mobilize because "war is nearer than ever."

Budenny said:

"We will say outright to the gentlemen capitalists that we have grown so much we will beat them wholesale or retail, day or night, summer or winter or whenever necessary."

All Urged to Vote.

Pravda, official organ of the Communist Party, featured a party manifesto calling on everyone to go to the polls Sunday as evidence members and nonmembers of the party were united behind the government.

(The electorate will vote Sunday in Russia's first direct national election. Voters will elect the Supreme Soviet provided by the new constitution. They will use secret ballots.

(The Supreme Soviet, a national legislature, will have two chambers —the Soviet of the Union and the Soviet of Nationalities.)

13 More Executed.

A total of 13 death sentences in the "purge" of enemies of the state and nine indictments of alleged wreckers was reported as Pravda praised the punitive drives.

One of the condemned was a peasant charged with hiring a friend to kill a woman candidate for the Supreme Soviet. For "practices which killed livestock" six persons were sentenced to death in Ordjonikidze Province and four in the Crimea. One person was sentenced for "grain spoiling" in Gorky Province and another for "wrecking a sulphur mine" in Turkmenistan.

Nine veterinaries in the Georgian Republic were indicted for spreading livestock epidemics, according to a Tiflis newspaper.

Madrid Planes Rake Mallorca Base of Rebels

Heavy Damage Inflicted; Shells Kill Number in Capital's Market.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Dec. 7.—A successful raid by 24 government planes on the island of Mallorca, insurgent air and sea base off the east Spanish coast, was announced tonight by the Barcelona government.

An air ministry communique said government squadrons inflicted heavy damage on Palma, Mallorcan city once famous as a Mediterranean resort.

The communique, terming Palma the base "where Italian resources predominate," reported three insurgent planes and one government craft were shot down in the air battle.

An Increasing Menace.

Because it is only 200 miles from Valencia and other coastal cities in government hands, the Palma base has been an increasing menace to east coast shipping and cities.

Bruno Mussolini, Il Duce's son, was stationed there while serving among Italian volunteers with the insurgents. He returned to Italy last month.

Insurgent shells killed a number of persons in a heavy bombardment of the market quarter of Madrid. Women standing in a food queue were among the injured.

Minor Panic Produced.

The bombardment produced a minor panic. Although heavily populated and close to the front lines, the quarter previously had not suffered greatly.

The British Parliamentary Labor Party delegation returned to Barcelona, en route to London, after a hurried trip to the Madrid front.

Behrle Statement Is Read at Trial

A statement which Harry (Spike) Behrle made to police, and which he later discounted because of a hazy memory, was read to the jury in District Court yesterday in Behrle's trial on a perjury charge. The allegation against Behrle grew out of his failure to identify men accused of shooting down Joseph J. O'Brien in an impromptu battle in Second street southeast December 8, 1936.

Indicted with Behrle was William (Country) Carpenter and O'Brien. They are being tried separately.

Lieut. Clement Cox was on the stand all day yesterday telling how Behrle dictated a three-page statement, and corrected certain portions which did not agree with his recollection of what happened when two carloads of men jumped out of automobiles and surprised Carpenter and O'Brien.

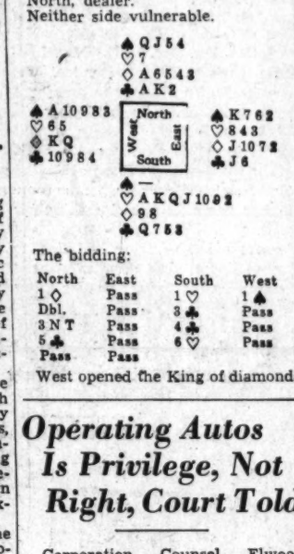
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Ducking for Slam Entries.

One of the most curious things about player psychology comes to light in slam contracts. When a player has contracted for 12 tricks he is often so obsessed by the notion that it would be fatal to lose 2 tricks that he hates to lose even 1 trick. Nevertheless, the making of his contract may depend upon the manner and the time of losing that one trick.

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠
Dbl.	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 N T	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the King of diamonds and declarer won with dummy's Ace. Right there he lost his slam. The loss of a diamond had always been unavoidable. When the clubs failed to break he also lost a trick in that suit.

South should have seen the necessity of playing for a long diamond to provide against the contingency that the clubs might not break. Since the expected split of the diamonds was 4-2, he should have seen that it was necessary for him to assure three entries to dummy—two in order to lead diamonds from dummy and ruff them in his own hand, and the third to get back to dummy to cash the last diamond.

This object would have been accomplished had he ducked the first diamond. Regardless of the continuation, he could have taken the second diamond with the Ace, ruffed a third diamond in his own hand, drawn trumps, entered dummy with a club, and ruffed another diamond. The remaining club entry would then have enabled him to discard on the established diamond.

Wildfowl Banded In Bird Sanctuary On Potomac River

The daily trapping and banding for identification of from 30 to 50 of the several thousand migratory wildfowl, now in the bird sanctuary of Roaches Run in the Potomac River between Washington and Alexandria, was reported yesterday by Dr. Paul Bartsch, curator of the National Museum and chairman of the Izaak Walton League's Washington committe for the bird sanctuary.

Many of the trapped birds are found to be wearing bands, which show they were in the sanctuary before, some of them several times, said Dr. Bartsch. Each year an increase in the number of visiting birds is noted, he said, and he believes Roaches Run is now known to wildfowl from the Gulf of Mexico to the Arctic Circle.

The Washington chapter of the league, at a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at the Raleigh Hotel, will draft plans for a George Washington Memorial Wildlife Sanctuary, extending along the Potomac from Washington to Mount Vernon. The regional council of the league will consider the chapter's plan at 1:30 p. m. Saturday at the Raleigh.

Operating Autos Is Privilege, Not Right, Court Told

Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, contending operation of an automobile is "a privilege and not a right," yesterday told the Supreme Court that District officials are justified in removing from the street "drivers who are a menace to safety."

Asking the court to refuse a review of an appeal by Alfred M. Laforest, 1737 W street southeast, whose permit was suspended 15 days for speeding, Seal cited one of the court's decisions that "an automobile is potentially a dangerous instrumentality, as the appalling number of fatalities brought about every day by its operation bear witness."

Laforest challenged statutes granting Commissioners power to suspend or revoke permits.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

A story is going the rounds of the Capital's cocktail parties involving the descendant of a signer of the Declaration of Independence, which throw some light on the fine, mellow country life as it is lived in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

* * * *

It seems that a driver for a laundry was reported missing; truck, laundry and all . . . A search was organized . . . He was finally found at a country estate where the descendant had invited him in for a drink; he had remained 16 days.

* * * *

Illumination is thrown on the mystery of the Duchess of Windsor's charm, by an American artist who recently did her portrait in France. "When she walks into a room," he is telling New York friends, "even the chairs become gay."

"—a crusade for Mrs. Roosevelt"

Since the publication of her memoirs has re-established Mrs. Roosevelt's popularity so solidly, I think she is now in a position to create a monument which would leave her immortal in American history, far beyond the immortality of Martha Washington or Dolly Madison or other first ladies.

* * * *

What I mean is that she could make it popular and fashionable for every American girl and woman, rich or poor, to learn to cook and sew . . . This would make the New Deal much pleasanter for American manhood to swallow, like orange juice with castor oil.

* * * *

One bit of human frailty which impedes the passage of the farm bill is the eagerness of Senators and Representatives to make speeches about the bill without reading it . . . They emulate Washington ladies who try to discuss a book without having read it or any reviews about it.

* * * *

Another reason why the South is growing a little peeved with the New Deal is that the flow of PWA money seems to have dried up before all the buildings burned by Gen. Sherman when he was marching through Georgia could be rebuilt with Federal cash.

"—even the chairs are gay"

Two of the most magical phrases of the moment in Washington are "The logic of the situation" and "a realistic attitude." . . . In any argument the first one who is cagy enough to use either of these phrases (or both of them tandem) is almost certain to win, or at least to leave his opponent completely flabbergasted.

* * * *

The beauty of these phrases is that they throw on us on the opponent to prove that he is not illogical nor unrealistic . . . Let me commend them to wives whose husbands are unreasonable. In the Washington manner:

"Now, darling, let's look at this grocery bill realistically . . ."

"Listen, Toots, let's be logical about my dancing three times in a row with that Hungarian attache . . ."

* * * *

Stout defenders of the President's grammar contend that he learned fully at Groton and Harvard the subtle differences between "like" and "as". . . . They merely say that if the critical Detroit schoolma'am had to worry about the voters she'd occasionally choose the more homespun way of saying something . . . It goes down more easily with the citizens of the Tenth ward.

Expert to Show D. C. Position in Mortality Rate

U. S. Statistician Named for Special Study; Collins Visits Gallinger.

A penetrating study of the District's death and disease rates, which are especially high with respect to tuberculosis, syphilis and infant mortality, will soon be launched by Selwyn D. Collins, senior statistician of the United States Public Health Service, Assistant Surgeon General Robert Olesen announced yesterday.

Dr. Olesen's disclosure that Collins would conduct the mortality-morbidity survey, one phase of a broad study of the Capital's public health establishment which the Federal bureau began this week, coincided with announcement of other divisional directors.

Dr. William G. Workman, one of the ace germ-detectives of the National Institute of Health, will direct study of the Health Department's laboratory facilities. The Gallinger Hospital laboratory also will be covered but Dr. Olesen indicated this work will be held up pending report of a committee of physicians which is investigating the institution.

Study of school hygiene, safeguarding the health of nearly 100,000 boys and girls in the public school system, has been assigned to Dr. Joseph O. Dean, who has had wide experience in this type of fact-finding. He will work in co-operation with Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, director of school medical and sanitary inspection in the District Health Department.

Dr. Olessen, besides having general charge of the survey, will direct personally the communicable disease study. Because of their wide prevalence, tuberculosis and the venereal diseases will occupy separate divisions. Assistant Surgeon General R. A. Vonderlehr will conduct the latter. The tuberculosis head will be announced in a few days.

While the Public Health Service was laying the groundwork yesterday for its survey, Chairman Ross A. Collins and his House sub-committee on District appropriations were inspecting the tuberculosis pavilion of Gallinger Hospital and the tuberculosis sanatoria at Glenn Dale, Md.

At Gallinger the party visited only the antiquated structures housing tuberculosis patients. Collins declining to go through the main building or psychopathic ward. At the Capitol afterward he refrained from comment upon what he had seen, except to indicate surprise that tuberculosis sufferers had not been transferred from Gallinger to the new sanatorium at Glenn Dale, opened last September.

Boy Submits to New Operation Preparatory to Becoming Twin

Skin Which Will Be Transferred to Burned Girl Lifted From Side to Form Tube; Next Step Is Linking With Girl.

Bravely submitting to the surgeon's knife, 16-year-old John Melvin Bonner, colored, yesterday underwent the second in a series of delicate operatoins preliminary to his being "Siamese twinned" with a girl, 13, whom he is giving a pound and a half of flesh.

Yesterday's operation, performed at Emergency Hospital, consisted of lifting from his left side the great expanse of skin which John will give Clara Howard and forming it into a tube pedicle. One end of the tube, which is about 1½ inches in diameter and 18 inches long, is attached to the boy's body near the waist, the other just below his armpit.

After spending a few days in the hospital, he will be allowed to return to his home at 1716 New Jersey avenue northwest to await the next step, the operation linking him to the Howard child by the rope graft preliminary to transferring the flesh to the girl.

Clara suffered burns on the chest, back, arms and neck when her dress caught fire in a household accident last year in her North Carolina home.

The boy and girl will be joined together for at least a month. When it is certain that circulation is normal, the flesh will be transferred to the girl and, in a new series of operations, distributed where her own skin was burned away.

Moved by the story of the Bonner youth's sacrifice, which was published in The Post last week, an anonymous admirer sent a $5 check to be forwarded to him. The gift has been turned over to the social service department of Emergency Hospital to be transmitted to John.

Cafe Owners Ask Exemption From Wage-Hour Laws

The National Restaurant Association, in convention at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday, adopted a resolution urging that the restaurant business be exempted from laws to reduce working hours and establish minimum wages.

Declaring the industry is attempting to co-operate with legislative efforts to set wages and hours, the resolution pointed out that most restaurant customers eat at peak hours and thus shorten real hours of active work by employes.

More than a thousand restaurant owners attended demonstrations at the Mayflower last night. They saw W. A. Denissen, an expert meat cutter, show how to cut chicken, lamb and veal for minimum waste. Denissen, wielding a knife with precision of a surgeon, cleaned and carved a chicken in 14 seconds.

Oldest Inhabitants Of D. C. Celebrate 72d Anniversary

The Association of Oldest Inhabitants—the patriarchs of Washington—met at the Raleigh Hotel last night to celebrate its seventy-second anniversary.

More than 200 members and guests heard President Theodore Noyes deliver his annual message and Frederic William Wile urge that the United States drop its isolation policy in international affairs.

With bowed heads, members witnessed the annual flower ceremonial in remembrance of members who died in the past year. They heard 28 names read off, a flower commemorating each one.

Wile, newspaper correspondent and radio commentator, warned of the dangers of aggression by unscrupulous foreign powers. While he admitted that he abhorred war, he expressed himself against policies of isolationism and pacifism at any price which he said were pervading the country.

It is not necessary, Wile declared, for the United States to go to war to curb the ambitions of "Jesse James nations."

Free Parking On Lots Urged As Tax Trade

Schulte Proposes District Waive Realty Levy to Aid Autoists.

Free parking on all vacant lots in exchange for a waiving of local realty taxes was proposed yesterday by Representative Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, as a relief to auto owners who won't be allowed to park all night on the streets when the snow season begins.

"I believe that all parking should be abolished downtown," Schulte, a member of the House District Committee, said.

"We shouldn't let a vicious minority rule this city, but we should adopt laws that will benefit the majority. I believe the majority is in favor of doing away with downtown parking. Only the merchants object."

Meanwhile, Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, promises to co-operate with Schulte in his earlier proposal that a conference of all District officials having to do with traffic law enforcement be called with the committee.

Palmisano also suggested that reckless driving might be curbed by increasing the penalties for offenders.

U. S. Workers Given 3-Day Yule Holiday

Provision for a three-day Christmas holiday for Federal employes was the subject of the first executive order issued at the White House since the President's return from his Southern fishing trip.

The President's order granted leave for all Federal employes in Washington, beginning the Friday preceding Christmas day except those "who may for some special public reasons be excluded from the provisions of this order."

The executive departments, independent agencies, Government Printing Office and the Navy Yard were the organizations mentioned in the order.

Catholic U. Law Dean Lauds Constitutional Regime of U. S.

Supreme Court Protection of Fundamental Law Called Happy Contrast to Situation Prevailing in Other Countries.

That "an ever-watchful Supreme Court has carefully delimited the spheres of authority in upholding the Constitution" was held a "happy contrast" in the United States to conditions in other nations by the Rev. Dr. Robert J. White, J. U. D., dean of the law school of Catholic University, last night at the university's celebration of the National Catholic Observance of the Signing of the United States Constitution.

He quoted numerous encyclicals from the Vatican protesting usurpation by governments of individual, human and state rights.

Lives and acts of the four Catholics who have been among the 77 Justices of the United States Supreme Court were reviewed by William C. Walsh, of Cumberland, Md., who reminded his audience these four were Roger Brooke Taney of Maryland, Edward D. White of Louisiana, Joseph McKenna of California, and Pierce Butler of Minnesota.

Dr. Edmund C. Burnett, of the division of historical research, Carnegie Institution of Washington, reviewed the lives and accomplishments of Daniel Carroll and Thomas FitzSimons, two signers of the Constitution.

Official representatives of 9 of the original 13 colonies were entertained at dinner in Caldwell Hall on the campus by the Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, D. D., rector of the university.

Collins Discovers 28 New Dwellings On Armory Site

Chairman Collins of the House sub-committee on District appropriations yesterday discovered that 28 new houses have been built on the proposed site of the District National Guard Armory at the foot of East Capitol street.

The sub-committee inspected the site while on a tour in connection with the 1939 District budget, but Collins insisted that it did not mean that funds were to be included in the bill for the long-delayed armory.

The sub-committee also visited the District Jail, Gallinger Hospital, the District Tuberculosis Sanatoria at Glenn Dale and the National Training School for Girls.

D. C. Man Found Guilty Of Extortion Attempt

Los Angeles, Dec. 7 (AP).—Victor C. Dockings, 22, Washington, D. C., laundry worker, was under a three-year prison sentence today after pleading guilty in Federal court of threatening to blind Dr. Harold P. Totten unless the Los Angeles physician paid him $1,000.

Fishman Scores Foul Conditions Of County Jails

Many social crimes are committed against the inmates in county jails who have no criminal records, Joseph Fulling Fishman, widely known author associated with the New School for Social Research, told an audience at the Institute of Criminal Science program in the Wardman Park Theater last night.

Fishman described conditions he had investigated in county jails, where mere suspects were subjected to filth and persecution.

"The forgotten men are frequently those in the county jails," said Fishman.

The healthy, he asserted, should be separated from the ill, and the innocent from the criminal.

Fishman was questioned by Capt. Thomas Rives, superintendent of the District Jail; Dr. James Leewald, superintendent of the District Training School; Dr. Carl D. Wels, of the department of sociology of George Washington University, and Dr. Manly D. Root, psychiatrist at the National Training School for Boys.

Fahey Insists On Right to 'Buy' Health

HOLC Does Not Operate on Appropriations, McCarran Told.

By James D. Secrest.

The Home Owners Loan Corporation was within its rights when it agreed to pay the Group Health Association, Inc., $40,000 over a two-year period in exchange for clinical services to its employes, John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, yesterday told Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada.

Moreover, the HOLC "does not and never has operated on appropriated funds," Fahey said, indicating that Congress consequently could not call it to task for the $40,000 expenditure.

Declaring he was entirely dissatisfied with the reply, Senator McCarran reiterated that he would bring the matter to the attention of the Senate Appropriations Committee when the HOLC is before it next session.

"If a bureau spends money without authority from Congress," he said, "there is no limit to which it may not go."

Fahey, after explaining how the GHA came to be established, wrote:

"I call your attention to the fact that the Home Owners Loan Corporation is a corporation organized very much like the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and some other Government corporations are organized, and that it does not and never has operated on appropriated funds.

Fahey added that the independent offices appropriations act of 1936 placed a restriction on the expenditures of the HOLC but that in the following year the provisions of the 1933 act, in effect, were restored.

"You will see, therefore," Fahey wrote, "that in the operation of the corporation the board of directors have a broad discretion in the expenditure of the funds of the corporation and have a duty to do whatever in their judgment is necessary for the accomplishment of the purposes of the Congress in enacting the statute."

As a final touch, Fahey recalled McCarran's sponsorship of legislation to raise the salaries of low-paid Government employes.

Justifying the establishment of the Group Health Association, Fahey explained that the HOLC personnel department had investigated the cost of sick leaves and the effect of illness upon the efficiency of employes.

"It must be recalled, in this connection, that the great majority of the employes of the HOLC are very low paid people and frequently are unable to obtain in the ordinary course adequate medical and hospital service," Fahey said, "and frequently find themselves unduly and hopelessly involved in debt on account of emergency and inescapable medical and hospital expenses, and these affect efficiency at work."

After the formation of the Group Health Association by "voluntary" action of the employes, the HOLC decided to utilize the clinical services in lieu of its own medical service. For several years the HOLC, Fahey said, has maintained emergency rooms for employes who became ill and has conducted a visiting nurse service.

"It appeared to be equally advisable and equally as lawful to assist in the emergency and to check the illness," he added. After obtaining a favorable ruling from the HOLC general counsel, the corporation contracted to pay the association $40,000 in consideration of services to be rendered over a period of two years."

All Is Not Food That Flickers On the Screen

Property Men Prove Duds When Asked to Play Royal Chefs.

By the United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Dec. 7.—The girl we pity is Miss Carole Lombard, who had to eat one of the most nauseating messes ever served on a gilded platter—and act as though she liked it.

Clad in a magnificently brocaded evening gown, which displayed the lovely Lombardian back to the fullest advantage, she was seated at a dinner table on a Warner Brothers sound stage today. Across from her was Ralph Bellamy in a deep blue dress suit, while at her right sat Miss Isabelle Jeans.

They'd just finished martini cocktails—which consisted of weak tea, and were being served with wine, which also was tea, but a little stronger and darker. The picture was "Food for Scandal," in which the wealthy Miss Lombard was to fall in love with Fernand Gravet, a nobleman, masquerading as a cook.

Gravet was to concoct some crepes suzettes, which are thin pancakes in brandy sauce, served flaming, and fine eating in any language.

The trouble seemed to be that Gravet didn't know any more about making crepe suzettes than we do.

A Fiery Feast.

He turned the job over to the property man, who also was ignorant, but who made 'em anyway. He fried up some flapjacks and placed them daintily on a platter. Over them he poured some French cognac, ignited the whole business with a match, and handed them to Gravet, for serving to Miss Lombard.

Director Mervyn Leroy squinted through the camera sight and announced that the brandy's flame was so weak and flickering that it wouldn't show on the film. Miss Lombard blew out the fire and waited for the experts to find a way.

They did, with a jug of pure alcohol. This they doused on Miss Lombard's manhandled pancakes, and the resultant bonfire was superb.

The technicians rehearsed this a couple of times, poured on more alcohol, started the cameras to rolling, and handed the flaming concoction to Miss Lombard. It was her job to puff out the fire again, take a big bite, chew it excitedly and tell the beaming Gravet that it was the best food she'd ever tasted. She did, too, but when the camera stopped she made a wry face and quickly washed out her mouth.

Knick-Knacks.

Rufe Davis is a stand-in for a lion during the filming of Bing Crosby's "Doctor Rhythm," because the vicious beasts which are a part of the plot are so gentle that they refuse to roar. Davis roars fine . . . Dr. Ray Keesler Immel, B. A., Ph. D., and dean of the University of Southern California School of Speech, received an assignment from Columbia Picture to produce a scientifically perfect name for its new European actress, Miss Dolly Haas. After due thought, Dr. Immel christened Miss Haas "Lilli Marlowe" because he said this name was rich in liquid letters, which had a "flowing rhythm."

Nat Pendleton, the bumbling bad man of many a film, reports that his 6-foot gopher snake, the finest pet he ever had, has died . . . The most photographed Indian in Hollywood is Nick Thompson—who turns out to be of Italian descent. He figures that he has been scalped 79 times to date, shot from a horse 338 times, fallen over cliffs 24 times and never has said a word upon the screen except "ugh."

Alice Faye finishes her present radio contract in two weeks, never to sing again for the dial twirlers. She says there aren't enough days in the week to play in movies and perform before the microphone, too, and that she's dropping the latter for good.

Brice Toes Feel Worse for Wear

You've got to start young if you want to be a toe dancer.

"I can do that," Fanny decided brightly.

So she launched into a few clowning imitations.

"Oh," said the dancer, "but I stand on my toes!"

"I can do that, too!" Fanny said instantly.

The next instant she was sitting flat on the floor.

Today she's wearing comfortable slippers around the set. Tomorrow, the chiropodist promised her, she can wear shoes again.

Complete Mobility Attained by Formerly Static Technicolor Camera; Redskins on Screen; a Notable Historical Short-Reel; New Play for the National; Katharine Cornell Sails; Lichtman a Capital Visitor; Bell Wins; Notes of the Theater and Its People.

THERE can be no further doubt of the adaptability of natural color photography to tempestuous melodrama on the high seas. Technicolor's ability to cope with a type of action and pictorial fury heretofore held to be beyond the range of the color filters was conclusively demonstrated to the drama desks yesterday afternoon at the preview screening of Paramount's all-color production of "Ebb Tide," coming to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday.

BELL.

"Mutiny on the Bounty," "Souls at Sea," "Captains Courageous" and other filmed stories of the sea have been executed in black and white with arresting effect, but never with the tonal depths or realistic beauty revealed in "Ebb Tide."

There is nothing static about the color treatment of this most pretentious of Technicolor's achievements. Action is not slowed down to accommodate a formerly stationary camera, but that camera has been given new freedom to keep pace with the most violent and cyclonic climaxes as well as with the more placid movements of the play that has been adapted with consummate skill by Bertram Millhouser from a story by Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osborne.

There is little of the usual melodramatic thinness of the conventional drama of the South Seas in this Stevenson tale of the part of the globe he loved best. Its characters and its developments are symbols of moral and spiritual deterioration—three beach-combers and a murderous maniac, into whose piratical schemes a young girl in interjected to lend the story a touch of romance and a contrasting figure of rectitude. About these reckless and degenerating lives has been built an impressively thoughtful drama that points its morals in negative terms. There is little enough that is heroic to contemplate in the characters of the men. Only the girl lends the play its one touch of straight thinking and upright living. Yet upon this foundation has been reared a dramatic structure that is completely interesting, sound and salutary.

Add to this the charm of natural color and there results a picture that is not quite like any of the others which, at first blush, might seem to fall into the same category.

There are other considerations that set this release apart and make it notable. It marks the first appearance before a Hollywood camera of Oscar Homolka, that sterling European actor who made such a profound impression as Oom Paul Kruger in "Rhodes, the Empire Builder." It also affords that distinguished former member of the Abbey Theater Irish Players from Dublin—now on Broadway—Barry Fitzgerald, the most fruitful opportunity he has had on the screen. Ray Milland and Frances Farmer complete the principal shipboard characters and Lloyd Nolan is the suavely villainous madman who has enthroned himself on an uncharted island where he murders at will and amasses a large, but futile, fortune in pearls.

Two hours after the screening, as this is written, the temptation is strong to dwell at length on this new milepost along the way of the cinema's progress, but that not only can, but must, wait until Saturday morning.

Perhaps the review will not be worth waiting for, but "Ebb Tide" most emphatically is.

If you are in quest of an item that need entail no delay, here it is. Special Paramount Newsreel releases, showing the highlights of that fabulous Washington Redskins-New York Giants professional football game, in the New York Polo Grounds last Sunday, now are on view on both the Earle and Metropolitan screens. All of the color and drama of this upset that made the Redskins contenders for the national championship of the pro gridironers are included in this newsreel coverage.

Another short-reel release in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "historical mysteries" series was unspooled in the Twentieth-Century Fox bandbox theater yesterday afternoon.

This one was "The Man in the Barn" and, like the recent "King Without a Crown," revived a controversial subject that has puzzled historians for almost three-quarters of a century—whether John Wilkes Booth really perished when trapped in a burning barn 12 days after having assassinated President Lincoln, or died in a bed years later in the Southwest.

The evidence of the picture seems to be that a reasonable doubt still exists—sufficiently so to form the framework of a vividly interesting short chapter out of a hazy past. "The Man in the Barn" will be featured on the bill with "Nothing Sacred" at the Palace, beginning Friday.

• • • •

It might be well to underline the fact that the Thanksgiving scramble for opening day and holiday business having slipped into the past tense, the Palace this week will revert to its normal policy of inaugurating its new bills on Friday, instead of Thursday. Then along will come Christmas and New Years and heaven only knows what will happen—heaven, that is, and the local theater managements.

As was prophesied in this space when he won a trade paper award for the same accomplishment, J. Raymond Bell—no relation—in charge of publicity for the Loew interests in Washington, yesterday was apprised that his local campaign on the Samuel Goldwyn production of "Stella Dallas," released through United Artists, won the first prize of $500 in the national contest centered on that picture.

Out of the thousands of entries submitted by publicists in all parts of the country, Ray's was considered best by a board of judges that included Producer Goldwyn, Martin Quigley, trade paper publisher; A. Mike Vogel, trade journal editor; Monroe Greenthal, director of advertising for United Artists, and George Schaffer, that company's general sales manager.

This is the fourth major award won by No Relation this year. One of them was a trip to Europe from which he and Mrs. Bell returned only a comparatively short time ago.

Nice going is right!

Now that the disappointment occasioned by the abrupt cancellation of two December bookings at the National is beginning to grow a little less acute, it is heartening to note that on Monday, December 27—the gods being propitious—Max Gordon will open a new play here, with Roland Young as star. This will be "Spring Thaw" and is the latest vehicle for its star from the facile pen of Clare Kummer, noted playwright, who happens to be Mr. Young's mother-in-law. This, of course, will be in the nature of a repetition of history. Mr. Young last was seen on the stage here in "Her Master's Voice," also by Miss Kummer and a very neat comedy success, indeed. It is confidently predicted by its sponsors that "Spring Thaw" will be no less notable a success. Yes, the same Roland Young who has been seen on the screen in "Topper," "The Man Who Could Work Miracles." "Ali Baba Goes to Town" and all those other pictures since he was here in "Her Master's Voice."

Katharine Cornell and Guthrie McClintic—Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie McClintic in private life—sail today on the Queen Mary for a short vacation in Europe.

They will go first to London, where they hope to gather further information which they feel is necessary before they can decide definitely whether or not Miss Cornell's contemplated world tour is advisable, or possible, at this time.

In addition to a week or two in London, they will visit friends on the continent for a few days before returning to New York in time for Christmas.

"The Virginians," a double male quartet, will be featured on the vaudeville bill at the Earle, beginning Friday. These eight lads represent the selected voices from a chorus of 640 that appeared in the musical spectacle of "Virginia," which recently closed at the Rockefeller Center Theater, New York. All standing well over six feet in height, the boys have been facetiously dubbed "The Skyscrapers of Song Land." Each is a soloist in his own right.

Al Lichtman, vice president of M.-G.-M. was latest of the high-ranking officials of the Loew-Metro organization to make Washington a port of call—for a minute. After a conference with Divisional Manager Carter Barron, Mr. Lichtman sauntered down to the airport to board a plane for Hollywood. While waiting for his ship, he noticed an attractive young woman whom he was sure he knew. Upon inquiry, he learned that this is a small world and that she was Rita Johnson, an up-and-coming M.-G.-M. featured player, also en route to the West Coast.

Play Leads in Technicolor Film

A thread of turbulent romance is woven through the action of "Ebb Tide," the new adventure drama of the sea, adapted to the screen from a story by Robert Louis Stevenson, by Ray Milland and Frances Farmer, pictured above. The quintet of principals in this unique natural color subject, coming to Loew's Capitol on Friday, is completed by Oscar Homolka, Barry Fitzgerald and Lloyd Nolan.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Dec. 7.—Personal observations: George Raft's habit of flexing his fingers reminds me of a contented tomcat "making bread." If there is a highly seasoned dish on the luncheon menu, Constance Bennett invariably orders it. Jean Hersholt is the only non-English foreigner in pictures who never "talks with his hands." Julie Haydon has a provocative habit of leaving her sentences half-finished and her thoughts hanging in mid-air. Wonder if Dick Powell's too-frequent use of he-man expressions is designed to off-set his love songs?

DICK POWELL.

Lily Pons always perches on the edge of a chair like a bird ready to fly. Odd that Franchot Tone, with the tastes of an epicurean, should have the thin lips of an ascetic monk. No matter how good a joke you tell, Binnie Barnes always has one to top it. Peter Lorre invariably shuffles into step.

Away from the cameras, Marlene Dietrich's famous languorous expression too often becomes a sullen frown. Adolphe Menjou is a confirmed mustache-stroker. Claudette Colbert not only remembers the name of every casual acquaintance, but takes every opportunity to use it when talking with him. Fred Astaire is a table-top drummer—forever beating a rhythmic tattoo with his finger tips. When Grace Moore enters a cafe, she pauses in the doorway long enough to make the entrance dramatic.

Today, in a studio cafe, Walter Huston was holding forth on the power of vanity, and offered to demonstrate his point. At a nearby table sat a star who likes to pose as a connoisseur of art. Huston sauntered over to her table. "Did you know?" he asked, "that there is an exhibition of Crovenay's water colors in the museum this week?" The lady rose to the bait with a rush and a gush. "Crovenay!" she exclaimed. "Oh, I adore his works!" Huston, beaming, returned to his seat. "Who," I whispered, "is Crovenay?" "Now you've got me," grinned Walter, "I made the name up—and she is too vain to confess that she never heard of such a man."

The least publicized of Hollywood's unsung heroes is the film editor. Outside of Filmville, few people appreciate his importance or understand his work, and yet the excellence of every picture depends largely upon his skill. Motion pictures are shot without any reference to the story continuity. When production work is finished, the whole mess of film is dumped in the lap of an editor. His job is to fit those scenes together smoothly and make the story move along at the proper rate of speed. Sometimes he cuts out entire sequences; sometimes he uses "cover" shots that were filmed at some idle whim of the director. He can ruin the best material ever shot; he can take poor material and blend it so skillfully that it becomes a smash hit. And those of you with movie ambitions might be interested to know that at least four-fifths of Hollywood's successful directors learned their business as film editors.

Gracie Allen, on the screen or radio, is the world's champion rattle-brain. Off-screen, Gracie is a fiend for system, and insists on everything being in its proper place. Each drawer in her home is reserved for certain specified articles—and woe to the careless servant who parks anything in the wrong place. The other day, on the set, I chuckled to see Gracie lose her temper because her "dresser" had mislaid a make-up kit. "If there is one thing I can't tolerate," stormed the professional scatter-thought, "it's a disorderly person!"

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Fritz Kreisler in a violin recital Tuesday night in Constitution Hall, with Carl Lamson at the piano. Program: La Folia (Corelli), Prelude and Gavotte in E major (Bach), Fugue in A major (Tartini), Concerto No. 1 in G minor (Bruch), Melodie d'Orphee (Gluck), Sicilienne and Rigaudon in the style of Francoeur (Kreisler), Lotus Land (Cyril Scott), Malaguena (Albeniz), Jota (De Falla).

The applausive homage paid to Fritz Kreisler last evening by a crowded audience in Constitution Hall was but a just return for as fine playing as I have ever heard from this veteran of the violin. Not only was he at the top of his technical form, but his tone was almost at its most dulcet point of persuasiveness. His sharp sense of style was continuously operative, and, while his program contained nothing that he has not frequently offered before, it provided an unbroken succession of aesthetic satisfactions.

Kreisler's artistry, seasoned by experience, has a mellow quality inseparable from his personality. In the heart of his maturity there glows the warmth of an ever-youthful spirit, and the impetus of an unwaning vitality imparts eloquence to his tone. His poise, his calm reliance upon his powers, and his restrained energy are factors in one's enjoyment, which is further enhanced by his confidence in his faithful associate, Carl Lamson. The two have grown gray together in the service of art.

The classical section of the program gave us excellent performances of Arcangelo Corelli's "La Folia," the unaccompanied prelude and gavotte of Bach, and Kreisler's arrangement of Tartini's A major fugue. These readings had purity of line and proportion.

Since Pable Sarasate introduced the G minor concerto of Max Bruch to this country in 1872, the work has taken on such a patina of time that it is somewhat startling to realize that the composer died as recently as 1920. Only five years younger than Brahms, Bruch is in many ways affiliated with him, particularly in romantic predilections. But the Hebraic idiom of Bruch distinguishes his sharply from the sturdy Teutonic romanticism of Brahms.

Kreisler's broad and impressive reading of the concerto was followed by the characteristic miscellaneous group with which he ends his recitals. Notable in the performance of these pieces was the poesy of the Gluck melody, the languour and the delicacy of the muted harmonics in Cyril Scott's "Lotus Land," and the fiery sparks in the dances by Albeniz and De Falla.

Screen Actress' Dilemma Solved

The "mystery of the silly squeaks" was solved recently at a Universal City service station.

After having her brand new automobile oiled and greased for the first time Barbara Read returned the car to the station complaining that "some silly squeaks" had not been eliminated.

The service station attendants rechecked—and lifted the rumble seat. The "squeaks" were revealed as two small hungry kittens.

How the kittens got into her car remains a mystery to Miss Read, who adopted them as mascots.

ADistinguished Audience Sees 'River' Preview

By Nelson B. Bell

"THE RIVER." The Farm Security Administration presents a documentary film produced by Pare Lorentz as successor to "The Plow That Broke the Plains," with musical score by Virgil Thomson; narrative written by Mr. Lorentz, spoken by Thomas Chalmers. Photographed by Stacey Woodard, Floyd Crosby and Willard Van Dyke. Invitational preview at the Rialto Theater.

In "The River," Pare Lorentz, author and producer of the earlier documentary film, "The Plow That Broke the Plains," has produced a brilliantly illuminating screen treatise upon the irresistible power for both good and evil of the Mississippi, father of waters.

By judicious blending of scenes of transcendent natural beauty with others of the hideous devastation wrought by the angry fury of destructive floods, Mr. Lorentz has created a vividly dramatic study of deforestation and soil erosion and an eloquent tribute to the restorative purposes and intent of the mighty project known as the Tennessee Valley Authority. By simple and direct strokes he has painted an imposing canvas covering two-thirds of the area of the North American continent and depicting with startling clarity how we have "built a hundred cities and a thousand towns" to be at the mercy of the great waterway that first fertilizes and then destroys the greatest river valley in the world.

It is made clear how tiny drops of water in the Rockies and the Alleghanies become runnels, rills, rivulets and rivers to pour their crashing torrents into the Mississippi and Gulf; how in this overwhelming process the United States has lost its most valuable and most vital natural resource in the steady washing away of rich top soil in lots of 400,000,000 tons every time the river overflows its dikes and how the TVA seeks to remedy this appalling loss.

Farming the fertility out of the cotton lands of the South and the grain lands of the Middle West and West and the shearing of the forests from the crown of our continent are pictured as the cause of the Mississippi's rampages; the mammoth engineering projects of an awakened country as the cure.

The pictorial lesson in conservation is accompanied by an interpretative narrative that is eloquently read by Thomas Chalmers, well-known New York actor, and a musical score by the young composer, Virgil Thomson, that has about it much of the modernistic tang of Ferde Grofe's descriptive works. It is played by members of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, under the conductorship of Alexander Smallens.

"The River" was preceded on the bill at the invitational preview in the Rialto Theater last night by one of Paul Rotha's documentary subjects, "Air Outposts," devoted to Great Britain's use of air transport as a tightening bond binding closer together the far-flung outposts of empire, and by a Walt Disney "Donald Duck" cartoon comedy in Technicolor.

The large audience of high officials of the Government, diplomatic corps, the Congress and leaders in literary and civic circles greeted the final fadeout of "The River" with a spontaneous and sustained round of applause. Pare Lorentz, the author and producer, was a member of the audience at this Washington premiere of his film.

New Night Spot Will Feature Egyptian Motif

Opening of Carlton's Club Is Scheduled for Next Week.

By Chanticleer.

The name remains a deep-dyed secret, but the location and decorative details are at hand. Meaning that a new supper spot comes to town next week when the Carlton opens the doors to a handsome room in Egyptian motif. In fact, the room will be named from a suggestion offered from the Egyptian Legation.

Note these interesting details: Designed by John Koch, who did the Wardman's Metronome and Capital cocktail lounges and the patio at the Cerlton; Arabic in motif, with leopard chairs, an electrically star-studded heaven (502 stars, count 'em), moving clouds and a moon that crosses the ceiling in 35 minutes. (However, the moon will be slowed considerably before the opening.)

Date and name and further details another time.

Paul Kain, maestroing at Wadman's Metrnome Room, is scheduled man's Metronome Room, is scheduled to try a little suave swing over the radio tonight, 11:45, from WJSV, in honor of Vincent Lopez, an old pal. Lopez is "speaking" frequently these evenings at the Wardman—but to Paul, in this instance, and not the old familiar radio greeting.

It's Viennese night in the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room tonight, with Sonny Kendis and his orchestra (known whimsically as the Kendettes) and that handsome pair of young society dancers, Pierce and Roland. All the earmarks of a big evening. Chef Claude Jarrin will tickle Pall Mall palates with some particularly appetizing Austrian dishes.

"The Tenor of the Hi Cs"—Carlo Colletta, and his lovely singing partner, Carol Gale, have proven a lucky find for the Shoreham. (Carol is billed as the "golden melody girl.") They've proved real hits. Mr. Colletta has a "high C" reputation for two reasons—for his singing itself and from the locale of his late triumphs, with Miss Gale, which happens to be on North Cape cruises. In fact, it was on a cruise of Western Europe scope that the Shoreham "discovered" them. Frances Woods and Billy Bray, well known to Washington Shoreham patrons, are dancing this week on the Blue Room floor.

Travel note: Dick Richards, host at Boulevard Farms, is back from another of those frequent trips to Richmond . . . Popularity note: A young fellow whose judgment in such matters is verra verra keen insists that Helen Forrest is the tops in town vocalizing—she being at the Madrillon nightly with Johnny Shaw and his band . . . Eleanor Bowers is the red-headed songstress wowing the customers at Maryland Club Gardens these days. A prominent man-about-town, from Manhattan, planned to spend the evening with old pals here the other night but on learning that Eleanor was being starred at the Gardens called everything else off and sped for Mrs. Stamm's country rendezvous.

It's a holiday revue at the Lotus, with Shane and Armstrong featured but boasting Barns and Gordon, tap tango; Ruth Gordon, in a Russian dance, and Buddy Shaner and Marian Dawn singing with Bill Strickland and ork . . . A very cheerful Christmas atmosphere already has been installed at Brinkley's, down Southeast way, with music by Jimmy Bright and orchestra . . . Jack Campbell, Ray Nelson and Beverly Stull are the reliable trio at the Mayfair, with entertainment to suit the most jaded taste . . . Winter Garden Revue is on view at Bamboo Gardens. Many of the pulchritudinous ladies of the ensemble are pictured elsewhere on this page. All sorts of dance specialties—including the "lady in red."

Clash Is Feared At Ford Factory

Detroit, Dec. 7 (AP).—A clash between United Automobile Workers and Dearborn civic authorities seemingly impended tonight as the union thretaened defiance of a restrictive order on distribution of literature at the Ford Motor Co. plant.

State police were ordered by State Commissioner Oscar G. Olander to act as "observers" when the union, which says it is ready to file ouster charges against Mayor John L. Carey for "misconduct in office," attempts to distribute leaflets tomorrow.

The Dearborn Mayor and Police Chief Carl A. Brooks had notified the union that a specified district in front of the River Rouge plant had bene designated a "prohibited area" for distribution, because of "traffic congestion."

"The U. A. W. is going out there despite the order," retorted Richard T. Frankensteen, head of the union's Ford organizing campaign.

Montpelier, Vt., Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Republican Gov. George D. Aiken today denied having any Presidential or Vice Presidential aspirations.

He issued a do-not-choose-to-run statement following widely circulated reports that he might become the Republican standard bearer in 1940 as result of his recent demand that the G. O. P. be purged of reactionary control.

"It is not my intention in the least to take or seek any national Republican office," Aiken said, declaring that "my middle name is David, but I'm no giant-killer."

Chivalrous Broker Hit on Nose Defending Grace Moore at Fete

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 7.—Paul E. May cheerfully admitted today that it was he who took a sock on the nose during a night club controversy at the ringside table of the opera and movie star, Grace Moore.

May, an insurance broker, acknowledged he was decisively defeated by James McKinley Bryant in the flurry of fisticuffs early yesterday at Miss Moore's birthday anniversary party—her thirty-sixth—at El Morocco.

"Miss Moore is a friend of mine, and I admire her," said May. "I wasn't going to stand for any one hissing her. So I got up from my table and walked over to see who was doing it.

"The next thing I knew, I saw a whole lot of fists, and it was all over."

Others in the club intimated that members of Miss Moore's party were responsible for interruptions that annoyed other guests.

With Miss Moore were Frank Chapman, husband of Gladys Swarthout; Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Draper and Mr. and Mrs. George Schley.

Rail Trustee Calls Higher Pay Unjustified

Walter, of Great Western, Condemns Raises Made in August.

By the Associated Press.

Luther M. Walter, co-trustee of the Chicago Great Western Railroad, admonished railway labor and management yesterday to beware of placing too heavy a financial burden on shippers.

Walter testified before the Interstate Commerce Commission in its investigation of the railroads' request for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates. He voiced no opposition to such an increase, but declared there were some things within the railroad industry which needed "correction."

Scores Wage Increases.

Later off the stand, he said he believed that, "with the living conditions of today, the increased wages of last August were wholly unjustified." He said that because of the higher operations cost resulting from the August wage boost, some roads had cut off employes.

Other railway executives have blamed higher wages for part of the increased operations cost which they said necessitated the rate increase, but none has directly criticized the wage level.

F. J. Wall, vice president in charge of traffic of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, told the commission that truck and water carriers, as well as railroads, soon would be asking higher rates.

B. F. Parsons, chief traffic officer of the Chicago Great Western, testified that truck competition had cut his road's volume in livestock traffic and then had taken over many shipments of dairy goods and, more recently, of manufactured goods.

On Capitol Hill, Senate investigators heard testimony yesterday that the Guaranty Trust Co. was paid $340,000 and the banks lawyers about $333,000 for services in the 1925-1928 receivership of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad.

M. P. Callaway, a Guaranty vice president, told the Senate railroad finance committee he received an additional $25,000, allowed by the Federal Court for his services as individual trustee for one class of bondholders.

Callaway said Guaranty also received $139,629 as depository for one group of bondholders, $13,300 as one of the registrars of deposit certificates issued under the reorganization plan and $62,190 as an initial fee in its capacity as trustee for one class of bonds issued under the reorganization.

N. Y. Girl Evolves 'Canned Apple'— But Only for Paris

Paris, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Adelaide Hall, a dusky dancer from Brooklyn, took a few shakes from the Big Apple tonight and tossed them in with the naughtiest movements of the French Can-Can, called it "The Canned Apple" and dared the folks back home to imitate it.

The hybrid "Canned Apple" will have its premiere tomorrow night when the Big Apple Cafe opens with the double attraction of free drinks and Adelaide.

As Adelaide described it, the "Canned Apple" is a sort of a pantomime of a young lady with a nest of hornets in her bustle.

She was sure "The Canned Apple" wouldn't get very far back home.

Delbos Strengthens Franco-Polish Ties

Krakow, Dec. 7 (AP).—The four-day visit of French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos placed Poland and France on better terms than at any time in recent years, informed Polish circles said tonight.

(There had been a coolness between the two countries since 1934, when the late Louis Barthou, then French foreign minister, made a tour of Europe seeking signatures for an Eastern pact among Germany and her neighbors. Poland's refusal to sign the pact was credited with causing France to form an alliance with Soviet Russia.)

Bucharest, Dec. 7 (AP).—French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos was scheduled tonight to have an audience and lunch with King Carol immediately after his arrival here tomorrow morning from Poland.

Ex-Wife Sues Rail Head For Divorce Suit Hoax

Minneapolis, Dec. 7 (AP).—Katherine Stevens, divorced wife of Howard E. Stevens, vice president of the Northern Pacific Railroad, brought suit in District Court today for $200,000 against her former husband, Frederick H. Stinchfield, Minneapolis attorney, and Pierce Butler, jr., St. Paul lawyer.

She charged that her husband conspired with Butler, acting as his attorney, and Stinchfield, whom she employed, to force her to go through divorce proceedings against her will and then to accept a wholly inadequate settlement of alimony.

Eight-Car Crash On Maryland Road Injures 3 Persons

North East, Md., Dec. 7. (AP).—An eight-car accident tonight injured three persons, one critically. All but one of the drivers were from Washington.

James A. Houston, 1727 P street northwest, was leading a line of five cars being driven to Philadelphia. Behind him was Joseph Grabis, 1740 New Hampshire avenue, who was to return the drivers to Washington homes.

Houston's car and one driven by Eugene Waggaman, an architect living at Falls Church, Va., with a business address at 1408 New Hampshire avenue, collided. The five cars behind Houston's plunged into the wreck from that side.

Another car, operated by A. K. Scrives, of Baltimore, ran into the mass of cars from the other side.

Houston suffered fractures of the jaw and skull, and internal injuries. Hospital attaches here said he probably would not live. Waggaman suffered severe cuts and bruises. Mrs. C. C. Warfield, riding in his car and giving the same address, suffered a fracture of the skull.

Air Stunters in Cuba.

Havana, Cuba, Dec. 7 (U.P.).—Eighteen airplanes which participated in the tenth annual all-American air maneuvers at Miami arrived here safely today from the Florida city.

Man Bites Torpedo.

War, W. Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—A friend handed J. T. Altizer today what he thought was a piece of candy. He bit and it exploded, tearing his mouth and lips and sending him to the hospital. It was a torpedo.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Dec. 7.

THE NICEST neighborhood party this city has seen in many years—oh, perhaps, ever!—was when Tillie came home last Sunday night in a pouring rain. Yes, Tillie came home to the Union Settlement House on our upper East Side, and sang 20 songs and goodness knows how many encores for the benefit of the institution's summer camp for children.

ALICE HUGHES.

The neighborhood knows her as Tillie, but on the program of the Metropolitan Opera Company she is billed as "Natalie Bodanya." She is one of the great troupe's most promising young sopranos, and during the first week of this new season she appeared four times. But her best and happiest audience was the crowd of old friends up on East 104th street, where she poured out her heart in song for nothing but love and good will.

Of course, she hasn't always been Bodanya. When I first knew her as an occasional soloist at the Radio City Music Hall in its early days, it was Bodansky, and then it became Bodanskaya—more Russian. The Met now makes it Bodanya—but by any name she sings as sweetly, which is very sweetly indeed.

• • • •

Natalie calls herself a "settlement baby." Living 14 years right across from Union, she took part in all its activities. What she says was her "big break" came when the famous Marcella Sembrich gave her an audition at 16 and helped with her musical education. Last year the Met signed her, and now her career is assured. What better can we wish the little Bodanya than that she always stays Tillie o' East 104th street, always ready to trill for old pals and neighbors?

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Still on singers, big Lawrence Tibbett and his handsome wife stepped off a ship after seven months of warbling all over Europe. Larry says the Swedes were his best audience. After his three months at the Met, he will start on the long concert trail again.

• • • •

Those two pretty girls around town are Irene Castle and her daughter, Barbara Irene. I saw them at a matinee of "I'd Rather Be Right," which is standing folks up at every show. Irene is still about the most chic sight on the skyline, in spite of the fact that she is said to be pigging along on a $750 monthly allowance from Maj. McLaughlin, of Chicago.

• • • •

The town hasn't gone completely Cuba after dark, in spite of the super-special success of the rhumba rhythms and the new night club, La Conga. The Hawaiian influence is also having a terrific splash in the night life, at least a dozen of the supper dens featuring twanging guitars and pretty dancers and grass skirts. Cuba or Hawaii, but it must be exotic this year—though most of the Broadway clubs sigh over bad business. The smart East Side places, though, seem to thrive on . . . Speaking of such gay places, a real baroness is going to run one, to be called The Bagatelle. She's the Baroness von Knopp, who has had a similarly named place in Paris.

• • • •

Well, perhaps Father Knows Best, sometimes. At any rate, Jack Dempsey and the two children called pretty Hannah Williams out of the new Ed Wynn show, after all, and Hannah is again wife and mother of the Dempsey apartment on Central Park West. June Clyde, the movie girl who has long been a pet in London, now sings her songs.

• • • •

Thank goodness Ethel Barrymore didn't really retire, after all! For she's giving a marvelous performance now in Sidney Howard's "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle." Oddly enough, in the play she gives her "daughter" a lovely ermine coat which really was given her when she was many years younger. It has been remodeled along 1937 lines, and looks as beautiful as though it were brand new. P. S. "Daughter" gives it back when the act is over.

Mexican Touch for Mid-Season

By Ethel Ehlen.

Accessories are foremost in the fashion picture at present—to accent clothes for Southern wear, to enliven jaded wardrobes, and to serve as smart Christmas gifts. With new versions appearing daily, it is a propitious time to buy them. For cruise wear, holiday traveling, or just to add a bright touch to a dark winter suit, a colorful blouse in one of the popular Mexican prints is a smart solution. The model shown above of acetate rayon would also be a clever topping for a wool or velvet skirt of street or floor length. The turban, by Louise-sanders, is given an amusingly smart touch by the addition of two long silk tassels. Classic pull-on suede gloves are dramatized by the antique-looking bracelet of silvered metal; the handbag of suede is a variation of the smart feed-bag styling.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Plague Prevention.

China has for only a short time been organized in line with modern ideas of sanitation. And only over a relatively small part of its geographical area. Because of the density of population and the enormous number of carriers of infectious diseases, communities in China always are on the verge of epidemics of pestilence. Such a disrupting force as war can upset all the delicate machinery of sanitation anywhere, so it is no surprise to know that with the bombing of Shanghai cholera and other plagues broke out, even in such a modern metropolis.

Whether these plagues will spread to the United States is a matter of concern, but the answer happily is that the probabilities are decidedly against it.

The great world-wide pandemics of disease always have been blamed on the East. When the black death, which was in actuality bubonic plague, started to sweep across Europe, it began at Constantinople and Venice, both gateways to the East, and the many flare-ups that raged during the Middle Ages could be traced to their origin in Turkey and Asia Minor. Within our time, we can remember that the last epidemic of influenza was variously known as the "Spanish flu" and the "Indian flu."

As for Asiatic cholera, which is the most pressing problem in China just now, we have experienced in the past many epidemics in this country brought in from abroad. In 1854 it was brought to New York by immigrant ships. Again in 1873 and in 1911, when it prevailed widely in Italy, but there never was any difficulty since 1873 in controlling it, because the world had learned that cholera depended on a polluted water supply and that controlling the water supply would control the epidemic.

In the Philippines it has been known for years that nearly 8 per cent of the population were carriers, but efficient sanitary supervision of the water has kept it under control.

Before the outbreak of cholera was reported in Shanghai the public health service of the world had taken steps to anticipate it and prevent its spread. The United States Public Health Service maintains an office in Hong Kong, and the League of Nations has established one at Singapore. The league voted $500,000 to send units to China to fight cholera and prevent its spread.

All ships coming into the United States are carefully inspected these days, and the custom of allowing them to pass through quarantine if the ship's doctor radios ahead that he has no contagious disease aboard (called radio pratique) has been suspended. The incubation period of cholera is only five days, so that outbreaks on shipboard will become manifest before a ship from an infected coast can reach any United States seaport.

Heels Come Down Nearer the Earth

Women may have their heads in the clouds this winter, but their feet are firmly planted on earth in shoes with lower heels. Debutantes, their grown-up sisters, and their dignified mothers and aunts are descending to new lows—not only in daytime shoes but in many of the glittering new formal footwear modes that are dedicated to the idea that a woman should be able to have fun when she steps out.

Even in Hollywood there's a back-to-earth movement in heel heights among smart glamour girls. One public-spirited star who has long been a champion of low-heeled shoes is lending her support to a campaign against the wearing of spikes by high school girls.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Forestall Men Friends Calling on Her Without Prearrangement Is Girl's Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please suggest how I can let my men friends know that they cannot drop in on me every evening, including Sunday, without making an engagement beforehand. I do not have a regular caller simply because at present I do not know anyone I like well enough to give all my time to. I live with two other members of my family in a small residence, so that it is difficult to avoid callers when they come. I like these friends well enough and do not wish to insult them, especially since I have allowed the situation to drift along for months.

• • • •

Often I am quite busy with other things that need to be done. I have tried the ruse of "just being on the way out." Even so, they come in and sit down until I have to get up and actually go out. This is an irritating inconvenience. Some of them have a way of "coming to see the family" (the family does not object) and usually manage to wind up on my hands.

• • • •

I feel they would have more respect for me if they had to ask for my company instead of thinking it free for the taking. Besides, I consider it bad manners. I seldom call on anyone without arranging to be received in advance. No matter how much people may like you, there are times when they just don't want to be bothered. How can I get this across to my callers. Sincerely, BELLE.

• • • •

The Thing to Do.

DEAR BELLE: My psychic sixth sense tells me this is one of those "test cases" concocted for the purpose of finding out what a problem columnist has to say about a highly improbable situation. However, here goes: There is one never-failing formula for discouraging unduly persistent callers. That formula consists, simply, in being "not at home" to them. Any member of your family may say for you, "Jane is not at home to visitors this evening. She's sewing in her room," or "she's writing letters," or, "she's gone to bed with a good book," or "she's brooding with her chin in her hand."

• • • •

Or you yourself can announce to your uninvited callers, "Sorry, boys. But I've turned over a new leaf and gone formal on you. If you want the pleasure of my society, you'll simply have to arrange for it in advance. Sometimes I think you've got this house confused with the corner drugstore." As for being left in the heel of the evening with the family's alleged visitors on your hands, nobody's to blame for that but yourself. If you don't relish the prospect of sitting up with them, you can always be first to excuse yourself.

• • • •

Don't be overly solicitous in your concern for their feelings. It's fairly difficult to wound the sensibilities of insensitive persons; and there's something definitely insensitive about persons who make chronic nuisances of themselves without realizing it or caring.

M. H.

Correct Wedding Garb.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am going to be married at a small church wedding. My one attendant and I are going to wear long velvet afternoon dresses with short puffed sleeves. Is it necessary that we wear some kind of hat, since it is going to be in church? And if we wear hats is it necessary to wear gloves, also? I want to keep it rather informal. V. B.

• • • •

DEAR V. B.: When a wedding gown is of the "afternoon dress" variety, it is customary to top it off with a hat to match. And when afternoon dress and hat are worn by the bride and her attendant, it is customary to have them fashioned on more conservative lines for a church wedding than for a wedding solemnized at home. In my opinion short puffed sleeves are something of an innovation for bride's wear, inasmuch as wedding gowns are traditionally supposed to be made with long sleeves. Gloves will be necessary to complete your costumes, and since the sleeves are short, it might be best to choose really long ones. However, there is no hard-and-fast rule governing this particular type of case, so do as you like. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Your Figure, Madame!

Expert Criticizes Marlene Dietrich; Says Legs Show Exercise Lack.

By Ida Jean Kain.

BEAUTIFUL legs are rare even among beauties. It's heresy to say it, but Marlene Dietrich, the No. 1 Glamour Girl of the screen, does not have the perfect legs with which she is credited.

To me this leg legend seems relatively unimportant in the aura of Dietrich glamour. Artists rave over the delicately molded bony structure of her face and one flutter of her long eyelashes is enough to start the Trojan war all over again. This movie siren has beauty plus.

To the eye trained to detect flaws in musculature, these famous legs lack muscle tonus and symmetry. A slight sag along the calf contour indicates that Miss Dietrich does not keep her figure the hard way.

Leg contours are the barometer of your exercise program. They are the final test of the efficiency of your daily dozen. Unless you participate in active sports or practice carefully selected exercises, the leg muscles are not put into use. The resultant lack of muscle tone is marked by a lack of symmetry and is to be found in fat legs or thin legs. Regardless of weight, the poorest leg development is to be found among women who spend most of their time indoors.

As a rule, dancers, swimmers and skaters have beautiful legs. In some of these professions the legs are overdeveloped from constant exercise of a certain type. In recent years, however, it has been discovered that this tendency to overdevelopment can be counteracted by exercise of another type. Ballet dancers turn to tap dancing to keep their leg muscles long and smooth. On the same principle, the woman who wants to develop her legs will perform contracting exercises on the toes, following this exercise with stretching and relaxing. To slim down thick calves, the exercise should be of the type to stretch the muscles. Such exercises are performed with the feet pointed, toes pulled toward the instep.

Climbing is excellent leg exercise.

Sonja Henie, the ice queen, has legs that are as firm and compact as those of an active child. She recently insured them for an amount that would pay her $5,000 a week—no less—in the event of injury! In spite of the fact that young star has skated all her life, there is no bunchiness in the muscles of the calf. The slight overdevelopment through the thighs is caused by the constant use of these muscles. It is these powerful thigh muscles which swing the legs back and forward in the long swooping movements of a skater's routine. The average woman's thighs are underdeveloped and she needs exercises which move the legs at the hips in side circles, swinging the legs from the hips.

Skating, Swimming, Hiking and Dancing Urged to Build Beauty.

The Radio City Rockettes have as lovely legs as you could find anywhere. Their long hours of dancing has caused no trouble with the calf muscles because they know how to offset one exercise with another. Frequently after they have been contracting the leg muscles they will stretch the leg muscles by a few high kicking exercises.

Standing and walking, which afford the only leg exercise for the average woman, are too mild to develop the legs to beautiful form. Exercise is the foundation of lovely contours.

Mrs. Roosevelt Arranges Holiday Social Program

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

Note to those leaving cards at the White House:

Be sure your address is on them. This season more than 200 white pasteboards, minus addresses, have been deposited at the Executive Mansion, with the result that when invitations are in order, White House secretaries do not know where to send them—what with so many newcomers and so many visitors to Washington.

HOPE R. MILLER.

This was brought to light yesterday in a press conference that touched on everything from the Roosevelt Christmas schedule to the current conflict in Japan.

Attending the conference was Mrs. Waka Yamada, representative of the Shufu-No-Tomo, "the Ladies Home Journal of Japan," who said she had come to the United States specifically to see Mrs. Roosevelt. Bowing and beaming, the small, black-haired woman, dressed in a blue kimono with a gray obi, stated through her interpreter, Miss Tojiko Kubo, that Japanese mothers wanted the current conflict to cease as soon as possible and desired the co-operation of American women to that end.

By way of replying Mrs. Roosevelt pointed out that women around the world "should work together to find ways to prevent differences from reaching the point of conflict, if possible." Also among visitors at the conference was Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt, national president of the League of American Pen Women.

• • • •

In the course of her conference Mrs. Roosevelt mentioned that new furniture in the blue room had replaced the gold chairs and sofas purchased from France for the Executive Mansion during the Monroe Administration. The old furniture—16 pieces—has been sent to the National Museum.

Discussing her Christmas calendar the First Lady said there would be a dance for 400 guests on December 30, complimenting John Roosevelt and his fiancee, Miss Anne Lindsay Clark, daughter of Mrs. F. Haven Clark, of Boston. Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, jr., will come to the White House Christmas eve, remain overnight and leave Christmas afternoon for Wilmington where they will visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene duPont. They will be back at the White House for the dance.

Also on the Christmas schedule of parties is the one planned for December 27, in honor of Sara Delano Roosevelt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, and William Donner Roosevelt, son of the former Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, who is now Mrs. Curtin Winsor. Mr. and Mrs. Winsor and young "Bill" will arrive at the White House on the day of the party.

• • • •

There will be two Christmas dinners at the Executive Mansion this year. One at the luncheon hour when the children will be present, and the other in the evening for the grown-ups. With the President and Mrs. Roosevelt for Christmas, in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt and their children, will be John Roosevelt, the President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt; the President's sister-in-law, Mrs. J. R. Roosevelt, and Harry Hopkins and his daughter, Diana.

From now until the holidays, the First Lady's program will cover a constant round of activity. On December 18, she will be in New York to trim a tree for the Women's Trade Union League, and will attend the party of that organization December 20. The day between, December 19, she will decorate a tree in Hyde Park for the staff of the Roosevelt estate.

• • • •

Her calendar for this week is crowded, as usual. Yesterday, following the conference, she entertained the Cabinet hostesses at luncheon and then received two sets of guests in the afternoon.

Today she will be honor guest at the tea of the League of American Pen Women at the Grafton Hotel.

Tomorrow—she will entertain at tea from 4 to 5 o'clock, and at another from 5 to 6.

Friday—she will receive three groups at the White House. One will be the directors of the professional projects of the Works Progress Administration, who will be introduced by Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward; another, members of the Democratic Women's National Council, and still another, a group invited by Representative Caroline O'Day to hear a talk by Prof. Patrick Murphy Malin on the plight of the Basque children.

Saturday—she will give her annual "Gridiron widows" party to which newspaper women, Cabinet hostesses and women officials have also been invited.

Sunday—she hopes to go to the concert of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Monday—she will have a press conference at 11 o'clock and will entertain at luncheon the committee of the American Book Seller's Association, which makes the biennial presentation of books to the White House. That evening, she will attend a meeting of the Washington Housing Association.

Former German Baroness Visits Washington

who is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Matthew E. Hanna, at the latter's apartment at 1919 Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. Sykes, who was a German baroness before her marriage to a prominent American businessman, will be here a week or ten days longer before returning to her home in Cleveland.

Navy, Marine Sets Turn Out At Holcomb Fete

Brilliant Crowd Present in Beautiful Old Home at Barracks.

The Navy and the Marine Corps turned out yesterday for their second big social event in as many days—the at home given by the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb. The day before, 2,000 had gone to the Army and Navy Country Club for the reception given by the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Edison.

Parties given at the Marine Barracks—quarters of the Holcombs—differ from any others held in Washington because of the unusual setting. This house, a great brick structure of classic design, is one of the oldest in the Capital. Some say it is the longest continually inhabited home anywhere in the District. It served as British headquarters in the War of 1812.

Home Is Furnished With Rare Pieces

Mrs. Holcomb has furnished her home with a combination of beautiful old pieces, more modern things, and objects picked up during her years of residence all over the world. Yesterday the old chandeliers of crystal glittered in the candlelight, and great vases of pink roses added to the scene.

Trim Marines were stationed in front of the home to help the guests with their cars. An aide, resplendent in uniform, made the introductions as the line filed past the Commandant and Mrs. Holcomb. The latter wore a long gown of black velvet.

Among those pouring tea was Mrs. Seth Williams, wife of Col. Williams, U. S. M. C. She wore black with a bright sash as color accent.

A center of attention at the Party was Mrs. Louis McC. Little, wife of Maj. Gen Little, who formerly resided in Washington until her husband was transferred to San Diego. She poured coffee during the afternoon, as did Mrs. John W. Beckett, wife of Maj. Beckett, of the Marine Corps. Mrs. Beckett wore a black frock with gold trimmings and a matching hat.

Officers' Wives Assist at Party

At the punch table were Mrs. Wallace Lind, whose husband, Commander Lind, leaves soon for sea duty; Mrs. Holland Smith, Miss Elizabeth Howry and Mrs. McCeney Werlich. Mrs. Paul Drake, wife of Capt. Drake, and Mrs. C. P. Van Ness, wife of Capt. Van Ness, also assisted during the afternoon.

Mrs. Holcomb is well known to residential Washington, as she made her debut here. The former Beatrice Clover, she is the daughter of the late Admiral and Mrs. Richardson Clover.

The Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Holcomb will entertain again at an "at home" on Monday afternoon, January 3.

From England.

Miss Beryl Hue-Williams, who arrived here recently on a visit from her home in London, England, is now the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Frances King Cooke, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. William Niller have issued invitations to an at home Monday afternoon, December 27, at their residence in Georgetown.

Bacons to Entertain Two Evenings; Mrs. Keyes Plans Breakfast.

Many parties are being planned for out-of-towners who will be in Washington for the Gridiron dinner Saturday night.

Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon will be especially busy. Saturday they are entertaining in honor of Henry P. Fletcher, who will attend the Gridiron affair that evening, and Mrs. Fletcher. In addition they will give an informal buffet supper Sunday evening for other visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Tunney and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kudner will be guests of Dr. and Mrs. John Oliver La Gorce, the men going on to the Press Club following predinner festivities.

On the distaff side, Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes will give a breakfast party Sunday morning for some of the guests who will be in town for Mrs. Roosevelt's "Gridiron widows" celebration at the White House.

Envoy of France Is Boxholder for Ball of Nations

The Ambassador of France and Mme. Bonnet, who were among the boxholders last year for the Ball of Nations, again this year are among the first to reserve seats for this year's ball, which takes place January 7 at the Mayflower.

The French government was the first to co-operate with the Hall of Nations Committee in sending a French student to Washington for a year's study in the graduate school of American University.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

A PRETTY and unusually frank Washington hostess was overheard to say the other evening that there was only one thing she hated more than listening to good music, and that was looking at good pictures. That is just too bad, as far as she's concerned, as next to parties, art seems now to be the chief occupation of Capital society. Everybody who isn't running a gallery, or painting, sketching or collecting valuable pictures and bric-a-brac is at least talking art.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Consider the number of people interested in this particular pursuit. There are Mrs. Dwight Davis and Mrs. George A. Garrett, who made society more conscious of modern art when they opened a Washington gallery of the New York Museum; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Supreme Court justice, whose landscapes of Maine and Mexico have been on view at the Corcoran; Miss Elizabeth Roberts, daughter of another Supreme Court justice, who likes to paint still life; Mrs. H. H. Sims, wife of the Attache of the British Embassy; Mrs. David Finley, Mrs. Benjamin Thaw and Miss Helen Davis, all of whom "sculp;" Mrs. Dean Acheson and her mother, Mrs. Louis Stanley, both painters of ability, and many others.

• • • •

A GROUP OF younger women who are earnest about art are the Misses Dorothy and Ruth Sowers, Miss Betsy Burke, Mrs. Brinkley Smithers and Mrs. Horace Peters. They work every morning, no matter how late they have been up the night before, in a class at the Corcoran Art Gallery, from 9 o'clock until 1. They draw from models and an instructor comes around and criticizes.

Mrs. Peters, who is a full-fledged architect, is at present drawing plans for a friend's house. The former Edith Colt, she is a graduate of Smith College and studied architecture at Boston Tech. She says it is all very simple, once you have mastered a few things like calculus and trig.

• • • •

THE NAVY is responsible for much of the gaiety in Washington this week. Service people are among the most punctilious in leaving cards on each other, which is one reason the parties given by generals, admirals, and assistant secretaries are always so well attended.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harold G. Bowen will entertain at a small supper party tomorrow night followed by bridge and poker, for Rear Admiral and Mrs. William Standley. The Standleys expect to arrive here from New York for a few days stay and will be at the Mayflower. Rear Admiral Standley was chief of Naval Operations until succeeded last year by Rear Admiral William D. Leahy. The Standleys will be accompanied here by Henry Sutphen, of New York and Long Island.

• • • •

AND STILL the parties continue to pile up! Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios are planning to ask friends in next Wednesday for cocktails at their home on Tracy place . . . Victoire Conley and her fiance, Richard Griffin, are being widely feted. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander C. Liggett are giving a cocktail party for them on Sunday, and Nancy Leiter will entertain at dinner for them on Friday before the Supper Club at Sulgrave . . . Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Bradley have cards out for a party on Saturday afternoon, when the Noel Trenthams, of the British Embassy, are also entertaining . . . A visitor to Washington over the week-end will be Miss Polly Ehrlich, of Boston, sister of Henry Ehrlich, correspondent for the Boston Herald.

• • • •

KATHERINE ("FIRST LADY) DAYTON is working hard on another play. If finished this season, it will be produced by Max Gordon. The author of the smash hit satire on the Capital was formerly a newspaperwoman in Washington. She greeted many old friends from here at the opening of "I'd Rather Be Right" in Baltimore a few weeks ago.

Downes, Leaders Of Paris Colony, Arrive Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Downe, leaders of the American colony in Paris, will arrive Saturday afternoon and will be at the Mayflower Hotel for a visit in Washington.

Mr. Downe is a member of the Legion of Honor and of the boards of governors of several leading American charities in Paris. Mrs. Downe, in her work for the American Aid Society, has been instrumental in raising money to take care of Americans stranded in France without funds to get home. Both are interested in housing and have traveled all over Europe making studies of new measures in this field.

They will dine at the White House Tuesday evening and on Monday Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock will entertain in their honor. Others who will give parties for Mr. and Mrs. Downs are the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Clarence Hewes, Rear Amiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt.

Minister Entertains.

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom entertained at luncheon yesterday for Rolfe de Mare, former director of the Swedish Ballet, who is staying at the legation. He will lecture Friday under auspices of Mme. Suzanne Laurent.

Luncheon Fetes Sra. de Eglinton

Unusual favors—boudoir boutonnieres of brightly colored paper blossoms with centers of vari-colored silk and darning cottons—were features of a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Tomas Cajigas in honor of Senora Lily Campbell de Eglinton, daughter of the Commercial Attache of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell. The affair took place at the Carlton Hotel and was a bon voyage event for Senora de Eglinton who leaves for New York tomorrow on the first lap of her return trip to Chile.

In addition to the hostess, the guest of honor and her mother, others present were Miss Eleanor Campbell; the wife of the former Minister from Venezuela, Senora de Arcaya; the wife of the former Minister from Panama, Senora de Alfaro; the wife of the first secretary of the Honduran Legation, Senora de Caceres; Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, wife of the former American minister to Venezuela; Senora de Fombona-Pachano, wife of the Counselor of the Venezuelan Legation; Senora de Requena, Senora de Viteri, Mrs. Abner Drury, Mrs. B. L. Hartz, Miss Betty Hartz, Mrs. Eldon King, Mrs. William O'Donnell, Mrs. Newton Brewer, and Mrs. Neitah King.

The Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi arrived in New York yesterday aboard the Normandie from Brussels, where the Minister was one of the delegates to the Nine-Power Conference.

They are accompanied by his young daughter, Senora Maria Joao de Bianchi, who is coming to the United States for the first time.

Mrs. Kimberley Is Ball Officer

That important matter of patronesses and boxes for the thirteenth annual Bal Boheme, "In the Island of Bali," to be held January 10 at the Willard is being handled by Mrs. Samuel A. Kimberley, who has been appointed chairman of these committees.

Interest is so great in the Bal Boheme that many prominent Washington hostesses have made inquiries about boxes for the event, and not only Miss Bertha Noyes, chairman and designer of the Bal, but also Mrs. Kimberley and other members already have been asked when boxes will go on sale.

The answer to that is "reservations may be made at any time," and requests should be referred to Mrs. Kimberley's committee at the Arts Club. Mrs. Kimberley is not only a well known artist member of the Arts Club but of the Society of Washington Artists and of the Water Color Club of Washington as well.

L. M. Leisenring, who last season headed the floor committee, will assume the same duties this year and is now forming his list of aides. They will go into rehearsal immediately after Christmas.

Beginning this week, the committee on costumes will be at work every day under the leadership of Mrs. Charles S. Piggot, at the Hotel Willard, in order to keep up with Miss Noyes and other members of the club who are busily at work painting many of the most elaborate designs on the pageant costumes. The headdresses alone require a special committee, also working under Mrs. Piggot's supervision.

Miss Jean Evatt To Make Debut

Mrs. Evatt Barnum to Leave Today for Sister's Party at Boston.

Mrs. Evatt Barnum will leave today for Boston to attend the coming out party of her sister, Miss Jean Evatt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Evatt. The party will take place tomorrow evening at the RitzCarlton Hotel.

Mrs. Barnum will be accompanied to Boston by Mme. Ivan Franges and by her sister, Miss Justine Corby, daughters of Mrs. William Corby, of Chevy Chase. They will also attend the debut ball.

Yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Franges entertained at a cocktail party at the home of Mrs. Corby, whom they are visiting until next month, when they will return to Belgrade, Yugoslavia, where he is with the Foreign Service.

Guedalla Amazed at U.S. Attitude Toward Taxes

English Author Criticizes Lack of Social Responsibility in Public Here at Women"s Press Club Luncheon.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Philip Guedalla, noted English author, made an on-the-record, perhaps even a record talk at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club yesterday at the Willard Hotel. He explained he had no secrets and disliked the increasingly popular parctice among important men here and abroad of talking off-the-record. "It's a way of telling a lie that can't be checked up," he said.

Beneath a surface of jest, he presented a keen analysis of conditions in this country. He expressed amazement at the attitude of Americans toward taxation; their total lack of a feeling of responsibility for meeting the problems the Nation faces and their failure to realize that it is "simpler to pay money over to the Government in taxes than to have it taken away by a man with a gun." He referred more than once to the total unawareness of the social necessity for taxation and pointed out the attitude of the British who pay uncomplainingly because they realize it is the only orderly solution of the problem.

He hastened to add that he was not recommending that what was done in England necessarily be done here. "It is a fallacy that what is good for one part of the world is unquestionably good for another," he said. "I don't believe in internatoinal blood transfusions. The corpuscles don't always blend—some are white and others are red."

He said, in this country, he felt he was not far from home, that we recoiled from the same things from which the people of Great Britain recoiled; that we still had laughter, that we were not among those countries which had "substituted simple gymnastics for public debate and in which you mustn't laugh at a dog or at a dictator."

"We want only the right to live in our own corner and to think, speak and worship as we please," he said. "We may have to protect that right. Our country and yours, whether they like it or not, may find themselves standing back to back, facing the dark forces which threaten the only thing in the world that matters in the last analysis, the life and home of the common man."

Turning to the field of literature, Mr. Guedalla said that, on the literary side, he had noted with distress a process of desiccation similar to that which had struck the Middle West. "Fiction has become very dry, as far as the eye can see, and the novelist is getting longer and longer," he said, "and is trespassing on the field of history.

At this point the author confessed his ambition to write two historical novels, one telling the truth about Bonnie Prince Charlie, and the other, a book entitled "So Gone the Wind." The hero, by way of a change, might be "a cultivated gentleman who, before he went off for military service, would have a life full of the fragrance of ante-bellum New York, he said.

Questioned as to what changes he had observed in the country since his other visits, he remarked that at the close of the Hoover Administration he found the Nation crying for leadership and that now it had plenty, was even wondering whether it might not have too much, and wasn't so sure it liked to be led.

Mrs. Guedalla was also a guest of honor at the luncheon, but left all the talking to her husband, only rising to acknowledge the introduction by Miss Doris Fleeson, the club president, who presided.

Kappa Gamma Sorority Plans Initiation Tonight

The initiation banquet of the Epsilon Chapter, Kappa Gamma Sorority, will take place tonight in the grand ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel when 150 members will be inducted.

There will be a musical program including songs by Miss Violet James, accompanied by Miss Gladys Ball, and Miss Margarite Bedient, of Baltimore, accompanied by Miss Vera Strock.

Mrs. Jernagin Heads 'Y' Group At Chevy Chase

Mrs. R. L. Jarnagin was elected president of the Chevy Chase Chapter of the Y. W. C. A. yesterday to succeed Miss Louise Eiker, who declined to serve another term. The election took place at annual meeting at the home of Mrs. B. A. McMillan, with Mrs. Joseph P. Brantley as assistant hostess.

Other officers of the chapter, which has a membership of 200 and is one of the oldest and most active of the auxiliary groups of the Y. W. C. A., all were reelected. They include Mrs. William H. Somervell, vice president; Mrs. Hubert N. Snoke, recording secretary; Mrs. Walter Browne, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Brantley, treasurer.

Mrs. William Lee Corbin, president of the Y. W. C. A., told of the new activities it is carrying on and Mrs. Carman G. Blough, membership chairman, also was a guest.

The chapter held a food sale last month at which $200 was realized. The amount will be applied to Kamp Kahert, Girl Reserve work, the World Fellowship and Vacation Lodge, all of which the Chevy Chase group actively supports.

Tuesday, under leadership of Mrs. Harold E. Doyle, it will sponsor a special preview of the Washington Civic Theater's production of "Noah," for the benefit of Kamp Kahlert's summer barn theater.

Business and Professional Women held their annual Christmas dinner last night with honor guests from International House, on New Hampshire Avenue of which Mrs. Larry is director.

The guests told of Christmas and New Year celebrations of their own countries. Salvadore Buitrago from Nicaragua, Jan Bazant from Czechoslovakia, Peter S. Y. Ten from China and Nadia Zadolin of Switzerland and France were on the program. Miss Adelaida Aceves, who is visiting the local Y. W. C. A. to gather ideas to take back to her "Y" in Mexico, also took part. Miss Jessie Smith, chairman of the business and professional committee, presided and Miss Mary Burnett, music secretary, sang, accompanied by Miss Edith Dawson.

SQUIRE GIFFORD'S
Hors d'Oeuvre—Chicken and Turkeys—For Hunt Breakfasts, Teas, and Holiday Parties

A whole chicken or turkey can be used as something special in the way of hors d'oeuvre at cocktail parties, teas, and hunt breakfasts. The meat is to be sliced very thin and served on sheer hot or melba toast. The dry meat has a game-like flavor.

Squire Gifford's Quansett smoked turkey and chicken are fascinating products, smoked over green hickory fires to a crisp golden brown, from an old family recipe.

Cooked and ready to serve, the birds come to you in miniature market baskets, wrapped in sparkling cellophane. Slice thinly and serve as an appetiser—or in salads—a perfect picnic dish, and a perfect hospital or sailing present.

Kenmore Association Sponsors Annual Benefit

Underwood & Underwood.

Nearly 200 players attended the annual bridge party for the benefit of Kenmore, historic home of Betty Washington, in Fredericksburg, given yesterday afternoon at the Shoreham by the District division of the organization. In the picture (left to right) are Mrs. Field Cheatham and Mrs. Thomas Clark, who assisted in the sale of the Kenmore china, at the affair, and Mrs. Thomas H. Taliaferro, president of the branch.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

THERE'S A DEFINITE RELATION between movies and toys, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Motion Picture Council and also of the Woman's Council of the Federation of Churches, explained to the latter organization at its meeting yesterday. Her "address" was not long and involved. It was a simple announcement that a toy was a ticket to the Saturday morning Post-sponsored program at RKO-Keith's and that everyone should be there to help along the alley Christmas project. In the afternoon she told the same thing to the Southwest Children's Council.

This afternoon at 4:10, over WJSV, there will be another broadcast about the Christmas plans for the alleys, in which The Washington Post is co-operating. Mrs. Samuel T. Hughes, denominational representative in the Woman's Council for the Baptist Church, and Mrs. T. W. Marshall, Juvenile Court representative for the same denomination, will talk and the little daughter of Mrs. Malcolm Scates will sing a Christmas carol.

CHILDREN'S DRESSES and toys to go to the Zeta Tau Alpha Health Center in the mountains of Virginia will be displayed tonight by the sewing section of the Washington Alumnae Chapter at the home of Miss Adelaide Woodley, who will be hostess at the December chapter meeting.

Under the philanthropic chairman, Mrs. Laurie Hess, the sewing section has been working ever since last Christmas. Even in the summer, the members gathered from time to time to sew on gay little frocks and suits, gingham dogs and calico cats, which will contribute to the happiness of the mountain children this Christmas.

They will be sent to the health center, to be distributed by the nurse at Christmas parties held for 500 children and grownups to whose needs she ministers.

After tonight's business meeting there will be bridge. Miss Woodley will be assisted by Mrs. John Ford, Mrs. Matthew Ramisch and Miss Dorothy Gatling.

Prize at Cards Is Gingerbread

Lafayette gingerbread was the prize for high score at the annual card party of the District branch of the Kenmore Association yesterday afternoon at the Shoreham Hotel. There were also on sale Wedgewood plates, bearing the picture of Kenmore, home of Betty Washington and her husband, Col. Fielding Lewis, which has been restored and is maintained by the association.

With the Lafayette gingerbread, made from Mary Ball Washington's recipe, were little leaflets telling the story of how it was served to Lafayette by Washington's mother on his visit to Fredericksburg to see her when he returned to America in 1784.

Mrs. Thomas Hardy Taliaferro, State regent of the Washington branch of the association, received yesterday. Mrs. Joseph Wall was chairman of arrangements; Mrs. Stewart Walker, vice chairman; Mrs. James G. Field, chairman of the candy table, assisted by her two daughters, and Mrs. William Bowie, chairman of publicity.

Mrs. Ralph Pendexter Heads U. D. C. Division

New President Succeeds Mrs. Richard A. Allen; Memorial Service Is Held and Reports of State Officers Are Heard.

The D. C. Division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, at its annual convention at the Confederate Memorial Association headquarters last night, elected Mrs. Ralph Pendexter president to succeed Mrs. Richard A. Allen, who has served for two years.

The day's sessions included a memorial service and reports of State officers and chapter presidents.

Mrs. Maud Howell Smith conducted the memorial service. The Rev. Albert Shirkey, of Asbury Methodist Church, offered the prayer; Mrs. Allace Streater, of Hillary Herbert Chapter, spoke, and Miss Lillian Chenoweth sang, accompanied by Miss Minerva Baily. Miss Baily was introduced as the daughter of a Union veteran, her presence signifying the union of the Blue and the Gray.

Mrs. W. O. Owen, chaplain of the division, made the roll call of chapters. Chapter presidents who reported included Miss Maud Snead, of Stonewall Jackson Chapter; Miss Liza Carpenter, of Robert E. Lee; Mrs. Cora Settle, of Dixie Chapter; Mrs. Martha Carter, of Southern Cross; Mrs. Marie Seddicum, of Richard Stoddard; Mrs. Eugenia Zea Rollins, of Hillary Herbert; Mrs. Julia Mason-Smith, of Jefferson Davis; Mrs. Alvin W. Tuck, of Gen. J. E. B. Stuart; Mrs. Livingston Vann, of Asha Faison Golwell Williams Chapter, and Mrs. Benjamin Grady, of Confederate Flag Chapter.

The officers who reported, in addition to the chaplain, included Mrs. G. H. Alexander, Mrs. H. G. Ball and Mrs. William H. Barstow, vice presidents; Miss Ora A. Smith, recording secretary; Miss Mary A. Roueche, corresponding secretary; Miss Margaret Cockrell, treasurer; Miss Laura Sansbury, registrar; Miss Margaret Daniel, historian; Mrs. Pendexter, parliamentarian; Mrs. Rollins, auditor; Miss Ethel Berry, custodian, and Mrs. C. K. Schrock, recorder of crosses.

REDSKINS 3-2 FAVORITES OVER BEARS TO WIN TITLE

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1937 21

This Morning

Redskins' Luncheon in Two Parts.

By Shirley Povich.

The Washington Football Writers and their luncheon guests, the Redskins, had just dispatched a mess of sick turkeys—you know the kind, one foot in the gravy—when President Harry Costello banged his gavel and said the meeting had come to order.

POVICH.

Thereafter the meeting, unlike all Gaul, was divided into only two parts. Part one consisted of a greedy and fruitful attack on the wardrobe of George Preston Marshall, and part two we will come to later.

Mr. Erny Pinckert, who plays fullback for Mr. Marshall, last week had expressed a great admiration for the new, de luxe $150 overcoat the Redskins' owner was wearing and in an unguarded moment of pregame exuberance, Marshall had hauled off and said:

"Erny, if we beat the Giants, you can have this overcoat."

So, President Costello, noting that Marshall was still wearing the overcoat he had promised to Pinckert, exercised his official position to bring the matter to the attention of Mr. Marshall.

"As the manager of Pinckert," said Costello, "I must insist that the overcoat be delivered. And furthermore, I have a great affection for those veddy, veddy British shoes Mr. Marshall likes to wear and if the Redskins beat the Bears I am applying for the same."

Turk Wants Justice.

Whereupon Mr. Turk Edwards, captain of the Redskins, rose to his feet in sections, all 265 pounds of him, and cleared his throat with a roar that sent the waiters scurrying to the storm cellar.

"Lest there be a miscarriage of justice, or something," said Mr. Edwards, "I was a witness to the promise of Mr. Marshall that his overcoat would go to Pinckert if we beat the Giants. And furthermore," thundered Mr. Edwards, "I insist that the deal go through. Because Pinckert has already promised his own slightly-worn benny to Max Krause and, as the manager of Krause, I am here to protect his interests."

The next speaker, a Mr. Jess Carver, of Pittsburgh, an ink-stained wretch who finds himself assigned to the Redskins, slyly prefaced his remarks by expressing a liking for Mr. Marshall's azure blue neckwear and asked the gathering to bear witness, in case the Redskins beat the Bears.

But the next speaker confessed that he was slightly disappointed in Mr. Carver, whom he had always considered as a big leaguer. "I am amazed that Mr. Carver should stoop to admiring Mr. Marshall's necktie," he said. "Personally, I have always had a great affection for that yacht on wheels that Mr. Marshall calls his car—the one with the parlor, bedroom and bath—and if the Redskins beat the Bears, I ask you all to bear witness that I have made the first claim."

Battles Gets Away.

It was Cliff Battles' turn to speak and those gallops he made against the Giants were not a bit nifty compared to the fast one he got away with after being introduced.

"I am sorry to hear that Erny Pinckert has gotten that overcoat away from Mr. Marshall," said Battles. "We've got that game coming up with the Bears on Sunday, and none of us, much less Pinckert, can afford to be under wraps."

For that, Battles was shouted down.

Part two of the meeting was a show of mutual admiration. The football writers said they liked the Redskins and the Redskins said they liked the football writers. The Redskins were wonderful and the press was wonderful. Maryland's Frank Dobson said that Ray Flaherty was the No. 1 professional coach in America, and Flaherty said that tribute, coming from a coach like Dobson, was wonderful.

"We had heard that the Giants were out to 'get' Turk Edwards, especially on the kick-offs, and like a good fellow I was hanging around Turk all day, just in case. Nothing happened to Turk and he and I were beginning to think nothing would happen. Late in the game, I had my back to Turk when all of a sudden, he ducked and some Giant came flying through the air. I went down, plenty hurt. I still think that after all I had done for him, Turk might have at least warned me."

Just a Breeze.

Modest Riley Smith, whose quarter-backing was described by both Flaherty and Dobson as a gem of field generalship, disclaimed all credit.

"Hell, with fellers like Cliff Battles to run the ball and Sammy to chuck it, a quarterback couldn't make a mistake Sunday," said Smith.

Sammy Baugh, too, had his say. Sweet Sammy from Sweetwater, in a drawl that was a breath of old Texas, said it was fine teamwork that won the game for the Redskins.

"It was great teamwork by all of us," said Baugh. "We gave Cliff Battles plenty of help. You should a-seen the way we all got out of Cliff's way so he could have running room."

Army's Rule On Players Is Changed

By the Associated Press.

West Point, N. Y., Dec. 7.—Army tonight settled, once and for all, the most famous collegiate controversy over athletic eligibility by changing its varsity rules for athletes to conform with the three-year standard in force at virtually every major college in the country.

The move completed the ceremony of "burying the hatchet" that caused the unfortunate break in football relations with Navy in 1928 and that resulted in the just-concluded breach between West Point and the Midwest's Big Ten Conference through 1935-37.

The new rule for Army athletes makes every player eligible for just three years of varsity competition, whether that competition is at West Point or at a college in which an athlete may have played before entering "the Point." Heretofore, Army has permitted a player three varsity years at West Point, regardless of his previous collegiate experience, a rule bitterly protested by Navy and other schools.

The superintendent of the Military Academy, Maj. Gen. William D. Connor, made the announcement that finally ended the controversy.

"Hereafter, the eligibility rules which obtain at Annapolis and the leading civilian colleges in the country," said Gen. Connor's announcement, "will be applied in determining that eligibility of cadets to play upon the athletic teams of the Military Academy."

Navy broke with Army after their 1927 football game, demanding that the three-year eligibility rule be applied to West Point athletics. Al-

Facts, Rumors at Baseball Mart

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—Facts and rumors from the major league baseball meetings:

FACTS.

National League okayed Cincinnati request to play seven night games again in 1938.

American League voted to continue annual $500 award to its batting champion, and to assign all umpires for spring exhibition games involving its clubs.

Boston Bees sold Shortstop Lou Menendez, with Columbia, of Sally League, last season, to Indianapolis, of American Association.

Chicago White Sox and Washington fail to agree on deal, with Sox demanding First Baseman Joe Kuhel and Infielder Buddy Myer for First Baseman Zeke Bonura and Infielder Lou Berger, and Washington sticking out for straight swap, Kuhel for Bonura.

RUMORS.

Pitcher Van Lingle Mungo is all wrapped up and ready for delivery to Pittsburgh.

Pitcher Buck Newsom, traded to St. Louis by Boston, will, after all, stay with Browns.

School Veto Placed on Charity Tilt

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A proposed football game New Year's Day at Griffith Stadium to help erase the Community Chest deficit was vetoed yesterday by representatives of the four major universities at a meeting in Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen's office.

Suggested by F. J. O'Connell, a public-spirited graduate of Catholic University's Law School, who is now in Governmental service, the idea was unanimously rejected. Two propositions were advanced during the discussion, but were found impracticable from the schools' point of view.

Jim Pixlee, of George Washington; Gabe Murphy, Georgetown; "Dutch" Bergman, Catholic University, and Geary Eppley, Maryland, represented their respective institutions. All expressed a willingness to aid the Chest drive, but explained why participation in such a game would not be feasible.

O'Connell outlined a round-robin idea, whereby the schools would draw lots and play two 30-minute halves. For example, George Washington would play Georgetown and Maryland play Catholic University. The winners, or in the event of a tie those selected by the toss of a coin, would play a third 30-minute period.

His second plan involved an all-star team to be culled from the ranks of District teams, which would meet an outstanding college team to be imported for the occasion. A third scheme to have the Washington Redskins meet an all-college team previously had been rejected by George Marshall, owner of that club.

Greatest obstacle confronting the schools, it was pointed out, are scholastic requirements which must be fulfilled to keep the athletes eligible for further competition. Players generally lag behind their classmates, and must make up much work in order to pass the semester. Thus, with practice continued, it takes too much time from their studies.

Pixlee stated that his boys, moreover, have no equipment available at this time, as it has been shipped to Boston for cleaning and renovating. Georgetown, Murphy said, had been out of training so long it would not be fair to the squad to ask it to resume, and Eppley concurred in that opinion.

Richmond B. Keach, Wash B. Williams, Walter Johnson, Jimmy Gallagher were among those who attended.

Briarley Academy Wins Second Court Start

Briarley Academy, making its debut in basketball this season, yesterday won its second game in as many starts, traveling to Baltimore to defeat Baltimore Poly, 37-29.

Lee Lodge, Tom Lodge and Bob Chichester, with 17, 8 and 6 points, respectively, led the attack.

Major Leagues Split On 1938 Ball Types

Chicago, Dec. 7.—The National and American Leagues, which used the "rabbit" baseball through their "boom" 1937 campaigns, split wide open today on the kind of ball they will use in 1938.

The National circuit voted unanimously to use a slower, more heavily covered ball next season, and less than an hour after this action was taken the American League decided to retain the faster pellet which it has used many seasons and which the Nationals had used for four years.

The American League action was taken soon after it was learned the National League had voted for the "dead" sphere and the quick junior circuit decision in favor of the faster ball was seen as the possible beginning of a "feud" between the majors over the types of balls to be used. Previously, it was reported, the American League had stood 6-2 in favor of the slower ball.

The new National League ball, technically known as the No. 4 ball with five strands in the seams instead of four, is expected to result in a year of improved pitching and tighter games in the senior circuit and another of long distance blasting and wide open tilts in the American circuit. The powerful world champion New York Yankees led the movement for retention of the livelier sphere.

Used Different Balls in 1933.

The last time both circuits used different balls was in 1933, when the National clubs performed with a No. 5 ball, even slower than the one they will use next season. The ball of the American clubs will continue to use is known as the No. 3 type. The separate actions were seen as a virtual "switch of horses in midstream" as the National League's 1937 attendance was higher than any year since 1930, and the junior circuit also reported a big increase in attendance.

"The new ball will give the pitchers a better grip," said Ford Frick, National League president, "but it will not impair the possibility of long hits if the ball is hit right."

It was learned that senior circuit officials, in deciding on the slower ball, were hopeful of reducing the number of "cheap" homers and scratchy hits off good pitches made with the lively sphere. In the 1938 World Series the ball used by the home park team will be used.

Other action by the American League included acceptance of the National League's recommendation that the All-Star game be held in Cincinnati next season. The American League also voted to continue paying umpires to work spring training series games and to continue its $500 award to the junior circuit batting champion.

The National club owners voted

New York Victory Puts Team on Top

Doyle Says Redskins Are League's Best as Team Prepares to Leave for Scene of Championship Battle; Freezing Weather Predicted.

Their startling 49-to-14 triumph over the New York Giants was reflected yesterday in the betting odds which labeled the Redskins as the 3-to-2 favorites over the Chicago Bears in the league championship game Sunday.

Jack Doyle, most famous of Broadway's betting commissioners, quoted the odds to The Post by long-distance telephone.

"The fact that the game is being played in Chicago Sunday may cause a rush of Chicago money and lower the odds, but on the face of pre-game developments the Redskins cannot be less than 3-to-2 favorites," said Doyle.

"The Redskins' victory over the Giants was no fluke," added Doyle. "The New York team just crumpled before a club that had too much for it. It was the same team that held the Bears to a 3-3 tie here."

Ray Warns Boys.

"I don't want you fellows to take that big score you ran up against the Giants, Sunday, too seriously," he warned his team. "Did you happen to notice what the Bears were doing on the same afternoon—running up 42 points against the Cardinals, a team that licked you 14 to 0? Well, then! And don't forget the Bears were saving Nagurski and a half-dozen others for Sunday's game."

Throughout yesterday, the Redskins' office was being besieged by Washington fans planning to make the trip to Chicago on special trains Saturday. A gathering of more than 1,500 Washingtonians is indicated by the number of reservations.

The Redskins' office which is accepting reservations for train tickets as well as game tickets, reports that it has a plentiful supply of upper grandstand seats at $2.20 and box seats at $3.30.

At Chicago, preparations were being made to dispell the threat of an icy field, such as marked the Bears-Cardinals game Sunday. Asphalt burners were wheeled onto the Wrigley Field gridiron to thaw the frozen turf and the huge fire-spreading machines did their work well.

Attack Revised.

Coach Halas, of the Bears, said the field would be thawed to a depth of 6 inches, then covered with marsh hay, over which a tarpaulin would be spread. In order to prevent the game finishing in the dark, the starting time on Sunday has been set ahead to 1:15 p. m.

At Griffith Stadium yesterday afternoon, Coach Flaherty continued to remodel the Redskins' attack. The Washington team, after revamping its original attack and defense last week to combat the Giants' five-man line will go back to its original style against the Bears

Gene Tunney Picks Maxie To Win Title

Former Champion Says German Could Kayo Louis Any Day.

By the Associated Press.

Summit, N. J., Dec. 7.—Gene Tunney came out from behind his favorite double shelf of Shakespeare today and predicted that Max Schmeling would win his heavyweight championship back from Joe Louis next June by a knockout.

Gene, who retierd undefeated to his books and travel nine years ago, was mightily impressed by German Max's form as he worked out at Mme. Bey's training camp for his bout at the Garden next Monday night with Harry Thomas, of Chicago.

"He could knock out Louis tomorrow," he declared after watching Schmeling maul two sparring partners. "Louis is out of shape, and Max there has the greatest right I ever saw on a heavyweight.

"There's no reason why Max shouldn't be the first man to win the title back, even if he is 32," Tunney continued. "Bob Fitzsimmons won the championship at 35, and I hadn't reached my peak when I retired at 30. I'm sure of it, because I was better in my last fight against Tom Heeney than in any other."

"He's in marvelous shape, and he has a wonderful heart," he said. "This is the hardest part of it all—that mat work after you've finished boxing. It takes a strong heart. Nobody has ever accused Max of being a great boxer, but he has plenty of everything else. He'll beat Louis."

Cambridge Upset.

Twickenham, England, Dec. 7 (AP).—The Oxford rugby team upset a favored Cambridge fifteen today, 17-4, in their annual varsity match played before the King and a crowd of 40,000. The game was played in a heavy fog.

Cloudy Weather Captures Third Straight Purse at Charles Town

Outdoors

With

Bill Ackerman.

There is bound to be plenty of fun and action at the all-day Turkey Shoot to be held this Sunday at the National Capital Skeet Club by the Bethesda Ike Waltons.

This frolic is in a way just an added attraction to the regional council meeting of the Izaak Walton League of America, that convenes Saturday, December 11, at 1 p. m. in the Elizabeth room of the Raleigh Hotel.

There is much that will be of interest to every sportsman in this area, for many of the subjects up for discussion vitally effect your sport in this vicinity.

Senator Augustine Lonergan, of Connecticut, stanch advocate of pollution control, will be a speaker at the dinner, while guests of honor will include Senators and members of Congress who have worked with him, as well as many other Government officials.

Charles E. Jackson, deputy United States Commissioner of Fisheries, will show the marvelous color film he made this summer of "Salmon and Seals of Alaska."

• • • •

There will be committee reports on the Federal wildlife aid bill and the Potomac River conservancy and program features by Dr. Paul Bartsch, curator, National Museum, F. C. Lincoln, of the Biological Survey, and Dr. G. H. Collingwood, of the American Forestry Association, so of necessity, the business part of the session must move fast.

The members of the Maryland Conservation Commission, with the exception of the newest member, Commissioner Northam, of Solomons, have had plenty of chance to run this department in the manner that it must be, if the best interests and the resources of the State are to be conserved—that is, with no political entanglements.

That they have failed to do so is a matter of record, so it is little wonder that some of the more progressive conservationists in the State have decided to take the matter in hand.

They hope, in a joint meeting of the Bethesda, Rockville and Silver Spring chapters of the Izaak Walton League, to further a movement to have the next session of the Assembly enact a law placing control of the conservation department in the hands of sportsmen of the State.

• • • •

We feel that sportsmen should have their share in the control of so important a function as the conservation of the natural resources of the State, but we also think that the commercial interests should equally share it, in spite of the fact that they have abused their control of the bay country for more than 100 years, and flaunted this abuse under the noses of the sportsmen of their own and contiguous states.

And today is not one whit different from 50 years ago, for was it not only this past week, to be exact November 29, that Baltimore City Councilman William Bennett went to bat for the commercial fish interests of the State by introducing ordinance No. 976, which provides for the repeal of ordinance No. 470. The latter, approved in June, 1933, prohibited the sale of large mouth and small mouth black bass in Baltimore City.

It is hard to imagine the passing of such an ordinance in face of the fact that 38 States and the District of Columbia have passed legislation prohibiting the sale of black bass at all times, regardless of where taken.

Neither is it thought that it will be passed over the protests of the Maryland State Game and Fish Protective Association.

Talbot Denmead, chief of the black bass section, United States Bureau of Fisheries, says in his annual report—"had all the interests pulled together, the black bass bill, which prohibited sale anywhere in the State regardless of where caught, would have passed the last meeting of the Maryland House of Delegates." This is freely admitted by the members of the House.

Plans have been laid for its passage at the next assembly, which is in 1939, but until then it is vitally necessary that the stopgap Baltimore ordinance shall not be repealed.

Timber Lady Outclassed, Takes Show

Favorite Is Victim of Poor Ride; Packaway Is Third.

You Wouldn't Call This Boy a Pikor!

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 7 (AP).—Maybe the current cold wave stimulated him, but, whatever it was, Captain Bill, rankest of outsiders, paid $145.60 in winning the seventh race here today. Jockey Lou Pikor brought in the victor.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town Race Track, Dec. 7. — B. F. Christmas' Cloudy Weather is the Man o'War of Charles Town. Winner of only one race in 17 starts before being shipped here, the gelded son of Mud won his third straight purse of the meeting today in the Hancock, a 6½-furlong test and the feature event of the program. Cloudy Wetaher, an $11 shot, showed a total disregard for Timber Lady, the odds-on favorite in the field, and ran her into defeat and then went on to down Packaway, the longest shot in the race, by 2½ lengths. Timber Lady was lucky to be third in the field of five, saving that position only by a head from Sea Dove. Shantime, the only other starter, lost all chance when she stumbled at the break.

Timber Lady, a filly who ran with the best sprinters at the big Maryland tracks, was poorly handled and lacked her usual blinding early speed. Jockey H. Simmons had the mount and he appeared to do everything wrong. In the first place he allowed Cloudy Weather to come through on the rail to take the lead and from that point Timber Lady swung out at the turns.

A cold wind swept over the plant, but the 4,000 customers did not seem to mind it. They gathered around the red-hot charcoal fires in the betting ring, went out to see the race and then returned to either get in the pay lines or look for something in the next event.

Mrs. E. E. Clemson's Adriatic made good for his backers in the first race, winning by five lengths with speed in reserve over seven others contesting at 4½ furlongs. Miss Tranquil was second and Veritas, the favorite by a small margin over the winner. Adriatic, a 9-year-old gelding, found the fast track to his liking and was never threatened after getting to the front at the turn. The pay off was $5.

Take Charge took charge in the second race, forging to the finish line three lengths in advance of Moths Wing in a battle of juvenile fillies and geldings. The winner was a $3.20 mutuel and was well handled by Jockey A. Vesselli. Roving Eye was third in this group of eight starters.

Another short price was displayed following the third race. Yankee Waters outclassed her opposition to beat Story Time by five lengths. Minna saved ground to be third. Jockey G. Terhune took Yankee Waters to the front with the echo of the starting bell and it was all over except the $4 mutuel.

The long-shot players got a chance to celebrate after the fourth race. Royal Business, with a $35.20 price tag, came from behind Lilith to lead the latter by a length and a half at the pay-off station. Schley Nurse closed gamely to be third. George Napier did the riding creditably.

A. H. Utterback's Nadir, ridden by R. Conner, an apprentice jockey from Houston, Tex., won the sixth race, coming from off the pace of Shot and Shell to score a length and a half decision. Chatterdoo was a distant third. Nadir paid $9.80.

At a juicy $145.60 mutuel, the longest price of the present meeting, Captain Bill took the last race.

The stewards announced that Jockey Herbie Lauch had been suspended for three days for disobedience to the starter.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—YANKEE WATERS, $4.00, $2.80, $2.60; STORY TIME, $4.60, $3.40; MINNA, $5.00.

YANKEE WATERS, first away, opened a good lead at once, was never threatened and won with speed in reserve. STORY TIME dropped back going to first turn and improved position steadily thereafter while racing on outside. MINNA saved ground to close with good courage. CALEB stopped after racing forwardly. LANDSMAN was used up trying to press pace and tired. JABBERIE went to her knees at break.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $15.60.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:00. Off 3:01. Winner, E. Johnston's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL BUSINESS, $35.20, $10.60, $5.80; LILITH, $3.90, $3.20; SCHLEY NURSE (entry), $3.20.

ROYAL BUSINESS, steadied along closest to the pace of LILITH, took lead when pacemaker faltered and drew clear in late drive. LILITH, first away, opened a gap, but weakened in final sixteenth. SCHLEY NURSE closed with rush. SCHLEY GORES came willingly at end. BLUE PRELUDE tired gradually.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but Shantime from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:26. Off 3:27. Winner, B. F. Christmas' ch. g. (3), by Mud—Just. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:22.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLOUDY WEATHER, $11.00, $5.20, $2.20; PACKAWAY, $34.40, $3.60; TIMBER LADY, $2.20.

CLOUDY WEATHER came through on inside of TIMBER LADY to take command entering backstretch, opened a lead while saving ground and closed gamely under hand ride. PACKAWAY, first away, could not keep up in early running, responded to punishment in late stages to close full of run. TIMBER LADY took lead going to first turn, but raced wide thereafter and closed on own courage under a poor ride. SEA DOVE was close throughout, but weakened when placed to drive. SHANTIME stumbled and almost unseated rider at break.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. The Granville. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:54. Off 3:54½. Winner, A. H. Utterback's b. g. (3), by Caruso—Fang Foss. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:48 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NADIR, $9.80, $4.40, $3.00; SHOT AND SHELL, $3.40, $2.60; CHATTERDOO, $2.80.

NADIR, steadied along while saving ground and closest to pace of SHOT AND SHELL, took command in stretch under driving tactics and was opening a gap at end. SHOT AND SHELL had speed to go to front at once and weakened gradually in final sixteenth. CHATTERDOO was held safe throughout. PENCADER closed some ground. GRIER LAD pressed the early pace and stopped badly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:24½. Off 4:27½. Winner, G. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAPTAIN BILL, $143.60, $42.00, $9.90; MAHI, $5.20, $2.80; EASTER HERALD, $2.80.

CAPTAIN BILL, taken back off the pace of EASTER HERALD AND MAHI, rallied to drive in closing sixteenth and was up in concluding strides. MAHI was rated close to EASTER HERALD, took brief lead and finished in tight quarters between horses. EASTER HERALD saved ground while setting pace, but was weakening at end. FLOWER TIME went evenly, but could not threaten.

Santa Anita Will Draw 93 Entries

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Dec. 7.—Ninety-three race horses, a record number, have been nominated for the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap, but it was still uncertain tonight whether the brilliant War Admiral would be here to try for the rich prize March 5.

Along with War Admiral, Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner, such nominations as Seabiscuit, biggest money winner of the year; Pompoon, Heelfly and several outstanding foreign importations promise to make the mile-and-a-quarter classic a grand climax to Santa Anita's 1937-38 meeting.

Los Angeles Turf Club officials pointed out that with the exception of Samuel Riddle's War Admiral and one or two more, every leading hope for the big race is either here or routed to the Arcadia plant.

The last $100,000 handicap drew 88 nominations and 18 starters, and was won by the Foxcatcher Farms' Rosemont. The year before, 82 were nominated and 15 started, with Bert Baroni's Top Row the champion.

The first running of the race drew 70 nominations and 20 starters. Fred Alger's Azucar won the initial event.

Top Row and Rosemont are already in training for the coming race, along with Charles Howard's mighty Seabiscuit, T. P. Morgan's Heelfly, Jerome Louchheim's Pompoon, Maxwell Howard's Sceneshifter, Fencing, Stagehand and The Chief.

Young Alfred G. Vanderbilt, whose Discovery was a forlorn hope last year, has only one candidate, Tedious, named for the handicap.

WITH BILL BENNINGS

SELECTIONS AT CHARLES TOWN.

Dear Al:

That line of publicity I gave Pork Chops the other day was too much for him and he visited the track today. His Fredericksburg (Va.) teacher gave him the day off so that he could ride to the track with W. D. Jones, owner of Timber Lady. Pork gave the press boys his version of the one-man big apple. He calls it the "black apple." He did a little truckin' on the end of the dance that earned him an 11-cent collection. Customers were amazed to find the track fast today. The track crew worked all night despite the cold and actually the dust was flying today. Those who bet that the track would not be fast during the meeting will have to dig down. The fans are treated to an extra show here. Horses work out between races, the horsemen preferring the afternoon to the cold mornings. Charles Town has the prettiest lead pony of any of the smaller tracks. The lady with the lantern of whom I wrote last year again holds forth at the same position each day in the stands. I haven't seen her leave so I'm not sure that she is still sitting on the fire as she did last December. Jockey G. Napier set a new style for jockeys today when he rode Royal Business home while wearing a motorcycle cap with big black ear flaps. BILL.

First race—Tar Heel has shown speed on occasions and might be ready to bounce out of the maiden ranks in a field as cheap as this one. Gypwick and High Dear figure to do a lot of running. Windsor's Hope probably would win it if in action, but is far down the list.

Second race—Divided Skirt is only a fair sort but meets little in this test. Gets in light and needs only the right ride. Steward and Schley B. to battle it out for the place money.

Third race—Star Turn, first on the also eligible list, will be a keen contender if not the winner providing he goes postward. I'm going to string along. Irish Wake has shown speed at times and is dangerous. Lilteen for the show award

Gevinson, Dupre Sign for Feature Bout Monday Night

Lefty Lou Meets New Sensation

Featherweights Matched for 10-round on Joe Turner's Card.

By Bob Garrison.

Coming as no great surprise but at a time when a bout of such potential calibre is to be greatly welcomed by local fight fans, the announcement of a Lou Gevinson-Tony Dupre feature bout for next Monday was made last night by Promoter Joe Turner.

Contracts drawn up several days ago were approved yesterday by the District Boxing Commission, clearing the way for the final bout of Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn's featherweight elimination contest held during the past month to find a suitable opponent for the local boy. Dupre, Manchester, N. H., boxer, defeated Armando Sicillia and Baby Manuel to qualify for the 10-round match.

Gevinson, defeated but once since he turned pro a year ago that time by Joey Archibald, meets in Dupre a clever counter-puncher who defeated Archibald last winter to win the New England featherweight and bantamweight championships. In Gevinson's last fight, a month ago, he defeated Cristobal Jamamillo in a wildly booed decision.

It marks some kind of a debut for Lou, for he will be asked to face the tedious task of handling Dupre without the ringside ad-ice of his manager, pal and second, Matt Twomey, who has cradled him from the amateur ranks. Twomey, suspended recently by the boxing commission from his second duties for a four-month period, will not be in Lou's corner.

Dupre offers some kind of a problem for the Washington boy, inasmuch as no lefthander has ever defeated him. When Tony won from Manuel last week it marked the eleventh time he had won from a southpaw. Gevinson also faces a weight problem, it was revealed yesterday, when he tipped the weight beams at 133. Dupre weighed 128.

For the latter reason, as well as the fact that his services would be invaluable in the absence of Twomey from Gevinson's corner, Twomey was considering the importation of Ray Arcel to handle, Lou, both before and during the fight.

As a reward for the winner of the match, Turner and Ahearn intimated that a big-name opponent might be imported later in the season.

Other matches to complete the card, to be presented at the Fourteenth and W street arena, are being arranged, the promoters announced, and details will be forthcoming immediately.

Postgrad BY LEWIS F. ATCHISON

A peculiar significance was attached to the meeting yesterday in Commissioner Melvin C. Hazens office at which a post-season game—for charity, was discussed and speedily quashed. Significant because another year may find the college athletic authorities closeted in another meeting planning a charity gare for themselves.

Only one school, George Washington, has taken cognizance of the situation created by the Redskins' appearance on the local football scene. Jim Pixlee honestly is afraid that the pros are going to sound the death knell for a pretentious football program at the downtown school, and says so. You may ask when did G. W. ever have a team and schedule of major proportions, but we'll get around to that later.

ATCHISON.

The others give the impression of small boys walking with forced bravado past a deserted and allegedly haunted house, chattering:

"Aw, there ain't no ghosts in there."

The first creak of a board, or rustling of bushes will send them helter-skelter down the road. And as soon as they are definitely satisfied the Redskins are here to stay there's gonna be a surprisingly quick change in demeanor and strategy.

True, George Washington is hit hardest by the pros' invasion. Washington never has been real sweet on either Georgetown or Catholic University. Their real support has come from the North, generally speaking, where they are better drawing cards than on their home lots. Maryland, because of its location, has been strictly a State institution—no child of Washington. It has kept pretty much to itself, dividing its home games between College Park and Baltimore, but rarely venturing within the District.

George Washington partially filled a void in the average football fan's heart. It imported some good attractions, it staged shows at its games, inaugurated an intensive ballyhoo campaign and made direct appeal to Washington—not its own student body, for suppo-t. And got it. Another factor in its favor was a student body of some 7,000—the vas majority night schoolers. They longed for something to cheer, just a- the man on the street, and the revived football program provided an outlet.

But when George Marshall transferred his franchise here from Boston the fan without a school had something he could claim for his very own. He wasn't segregated, in a sense, when he went to the pro games. Either you were for or against the Redskins, and he was for them. It made no difference whether he'd reached the fourth or eighth grades; ever attended high school, or even saw a college. As long as he had the price of admission he could be a bona fide Redskin alumnus. That was right down his alley, and the allegiance that previously had been George Washington's, was promptly transferred to the pros.

Hence, Pixlee felt the pinch when the town went procrazy, and recognized immediately the distinct threat the Redskins were to the security and prestige of his own team. The record-breaking turnout of 30,000 at the Green Bay game, followed by an exodus of 8,000 to New York for the Giant game one week later more htan confirmed his suspicions. Thus, he keenly feels the need for concerted action by the colleges to save their own skins from the Redskins.

Georgetown pretends to be indifferent to the invasion. Gabe Murphy, graduate manager of athletics, yesterday pointed out that the Hoyas never attracted enormous gates at home when at the peak of their gridiron glory. He contends that the team can do much better on the road than at home. It is true that Georgetown received $54,000 in its first game with New York University 9 years ago, and $40,000 as its end for playing Carnegie Tech at Albany, but there have been many lean years since then.

Much as it might like to, Georgetown can't possibly play all of its games on the road, and even if it could, there is serious doubt that the receipts would be sufficient to support a program of home games—to appease local alumni, as well as pay the freight for other sports.

Murphy was far-sighted enough to see the advantage of resuming relations with Maryland. An intracity rivalry, if we may call it that, is an invigorating tonic for any sport. That pact was consummated long before the Redskins ever thought of pitching their wigwam here, but now, with this new danger threatening, there is talk around the Hilltop and in alumni circles of a new alliance, with George Washington.

This, naturally, doesn't sit very well with Catholic University, which once enjoyed excellent relations with the downtown school in football. It was a dispute about gate receipts, an uneven balance between student bodies or something along that line, that led to a rupture in the rivalry. George Washington broke off relations, much to Catholic's dismay, and it is our private belief that the Colonials have often regretted their action.

"Dutch" Bergman, at Catholic U., is not complaining about gate receipts this year, nor has he at any time in the past, but he isn't one to sit idly by while juicy plums are dangled before his eyes. If there's going to be any pie-cutting, locally, he wants to be in on it. Bergman doesn't want to be left out in the cold while the others protect themselves against the Redskins, and you can't blame him for that.

The solution to the problem, slowly revealing itself to the colleges, seems to be a peace conference at which minor difficulties can be ironed out, new treaties respecting playing dates drawn up, and intracity rivalries planned and executed. Concerted action is needed to successfully meet the situation, and petty bickering will mean disaster. Don't be surprised if the boys do get together. They can't well afford to argue among themselves with the ground slipping from under them.

White Sox Insure 'Gee' for $100,000

Chicago, Dec. 7 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox have taken out a $100,000 insurance policy on Gerald Walker, hard-hitting outfielder acquired last week from Detroit. The policy covers the colorful "Gee" against everything but "kidnaping" by Detroit fans who resented him leaving the Tigers.

Army's Rule On Players Is Changed

though the two institutions played in 1930 and '31 for charity, the breach was not officially healed until 1932.

The new Army eligibility standard follows closely on the action of the Big Ten Conference in its recent convention in sanctioning renewal of relations with West Point. The Midwestern group also broke off with Army, beginning with the 1935 season, largely over the eligibility rule.

The immediate question rising for gridiron observers was over the status of football stars of other colleges who have entered, or are planning to enter the academy. Two of the more prominent of these are Bill Guckeyson, Maryland's classy back, who was a plebe, or freshman, at Army this year after completing his career with the Terrapins, and Carl Hinkle, Vanderbilt's all-America center of 1937, who plans to enter Army.

Queried over this situation, Army officials refused comment.

"There is no information regarding the status of such players as yet," one officer at the academy explained.

Coach Gar Davidson, retiring football coach at Army, was reached in New York and raised the question that cadets at the academy receive credits for athletic as well as scholastic activities. He indicated that placing of a ban on football players with previous collegiate experiences of three years might remove an opportunity for a cadet to collect athletic credits.

The Army eligibility rules long have been a bugaboo in relations between West Point and many of its outstanding rivals on the gridiron. Army went along with other colleges on the three-year rule, but held that the three years' varsity play would apply only to the West Point careers of its athletes, and would not include previous experience. Most major colleges made the rule apply to all collegiate experience of an athlete, regardless of the number of institutions for which he had played.

The break with Navy over the rule came late in 1927, even after the two schools scheduled a game for 1928. Discussion of the controversy went on for months, and the final official cancellation of the game was announced in January, 1928.

Navy insisted that Army adopt the same rule as in force at the Annapolis Academy and other colleges. The Army, citing reasons which it held "good and sufficient," would not agree.

Through 1928 and 1929 the breach widened, but the first of the depression years, 1930, with its growing need for aid for charity, caused the two schools to "bury the hatchet." On November 13 of that season, with the campaign nearing its end, Army offered to play Navy December 6 for the benefit of the unemployed.

Navy countered with its willingness to play on December 13, and that date was decided on. The game was played in New York, at Yankee Stadium, before a crowd of 57,003 spectators who paid $501,870. Other sources increased the total receipts to over $625,000. Army won the game 6-0 on Ray Stecker's 57-yard touchdown run. The two institutions repeated the "charity performance" in 1931, and then, settling their differences, picked up their annual scheduled rivalry in 1932.

A defense for Bronko Nagurski's line bucking and the power runs of Nolting, Manders and Sam Francis occupied the Redskins most of yesterday. But the passing of Ray Buivid, Chicago ace, also came in for long attention. It has been through the air that the Redskins have been most vulnerable this season.

Despite the probability that the injured Don Irwin will be available for backfield duty Sunday, Coach Flaherty plans to stick to the backfield quartet that started against the Giants—Cliff Battles, Sammy Baugh, Riley Smith and Ernie Pinckert.

Sarron Will Try His Hand Tonight As a Lightweight

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Petey Sarron, who dropped his N. B. A. featherweight title to Henry Armstrong here a few weeks ago, makes his debut as a lightweight in a ten-round fight with Carl (Red) Guggino, sharp-punching Hartford, Conn., battler in the New York Hippodrome tomorrow night.

Because of Guggino's success in recent starts, the bout will be an even money affair.

Two eight rounders, a six and a four will constitute the supporting card.

Italian Champ Is Added to 'Rassle Card'

The supporting card for the feature match between Jim Londos, self-styled international wrestling champion, and Billy Bartush, the Lithuanian grappler, was completed yesterday, and a flock of new faces again will decorate the canvas at Turner's Arena tomorrow night.

Londos and Bartush are to grapple in a one-fall-to-a-finish match, and it will mark the gorgeous Greek's first performance here since he left for a world-wide barnstorming tour three years ago.

Speaking from Baltimore, where Monday night he drew with Al Periera, Italian champion, at the Fifth Regimental Armory when the ring constructed by Ed Contos collapsed, Londos jokingly reminded Promoter Joe Turner to be make sure that "your ring don't break down on me Thursday night."

Londos was loud in his praise of Periera—so much so that Promoter Turner switched his card around to permit the Italian giant's appearance. Periera thus will meet Abe Kashey, the Syrian Sizzler, sometimes referred to as King Kong Kashey, in a 30-minute bout.

Of especial interest will be the one-fall-to-a-finish match between Mildred Burke, the feminine welterweight champion, and Clarice Davis, of Central City, Iowa. Miss Burke, who wrestles like Cora Livingstone, the one-time champion, has been a sensation wherever she has performed.

Cards Open Cage Season Tonight With Md. Normal

Catholic University's basketball team, 1937-38 edition, will be uncrated tonight in the spacious Brookland gym and tested in a game with Maryland State Normal starting at 8:15 o'clock.

The Cards ran the soles off their guests last year in a similar test, winning by some outlandish figures, and a repitition seems inevitable. Coach "Fod" Cotton's boys may not have much polish this early in the season, but there is no lack of enthusiasm.

Capt. "Irish" Carfoll will lead the host team into action, teaming with Wayne Ambrose at forward. Krawczell is scheduled to start at center with Miller and McKenna at guards.

Rudolph Scores Exhibition Win

Erwin Rudolph, 3 times world champion pocket billiard player, engaged Gen Ruark, local cueist in a 100-point exhibition last night at the Royal Parlor, 817 Fourteenth street northwest, and dealt him a 100-56 licking.

The former champ had a high run of 39, while the best Ruark could post was one of 11. A capacity crowd looked on and was treated to a remarkable display of trick shots at the close of the contest.

John Lewis Kayos Izzy Gastanaga

St. Louis, Dec. 7 (AP).—John Henry Lewis, world's light-heavyweight champion, bounced back into the heavyweight spotlight as a contender for the title tonight with a technical knockout over Isidro Gastanaga in the ninth round of their scheduled 15-round fight.

Joey Green Signed to Meet Temes at Rialto on Friday

The opening of his new Arena office at 713 Ninth street northwest, and virtual rounding out of Friday night's initial boxing show for the luxurious Rialto Theater yesterday featured the activities of Matchmaker Howard Livingston.

Lemuel (Biff) Lemieux, New Bedford, Mass., featherweight, who boxes Joey Archibald in the scheduled ten-round feature of Friday's show, was to report here at a late hour last night will work out in Darby's gymnasium, 511 Eleventh street northwest, this afternoon.

Already having signed "Scrappy" Jack Clark to do battle with "Irish Eddie" Foran in the scheduled eight-round semifinal, Livingston yesterday had booked popular Joey Green, clever local Jewish lightweight, for a special six-round duel with Bill Temes, just returned from Florida.

In yet another six-round event Johnny Compo, of New Haven, Conn., is to wage war with Mel Beshoun, Baltimore. Both are excellent club fighters and lightweights.

Yet another preliminary, a four-rounder, will be announced.

Scholastic Stars Work In 2 Shifts

Local Teams to Be Split Into Central, Western Practice Squads.

Due to the huge squad of players enrolled in the good cause, District All-Star Scholastics preparing for their big football game with Monroe, Georgia, A. and M. in Catholic University's bowl a week from Sunday, December 19, hereafter will be divided into two shifts.

Starting today these squads will work out on both the Central and Western High School athletic fields at 3:30 o'clock daily.

Hardy Pearce, Central; Johnny Baker, Washington and Lee, and Gene Augusterfer, St. John's are to supervise one squad of players on the Central field while Dan Ahern and Artie Boyd will handle the Western High contingent. Orrel Mitchell, enterprising Gonzago mentor, probably will assist Boyd and Ahern when pressure of his work lifts sufficiently to permit his joining the workouts.

Over 50 enthusiastic boys turned out for the first workout at Western yesterday. Punting and passing were permitted and fundamentals today will be imparted the players when they are segregated sufficiently to warrant their bearing down in earnest for the big assignment just ahead.

Under existing plans, every man on the District all-scholastic squad will see action against Monroe, and indications are that four teams will be used in as many quarters, thereby permitting the public a close-up of all of the scholastic favorites in this proximity.

While the players are working out spiritedly on two fields the Varsity Club made a big stride forward yesterday by naming Sidney Lust, movie owner, as chairman of the ticket committee. A popular scale of prices was voted which finds over 5,000 seats for students only on sale at 50 cents, over 3,000 general admissions scaled at $1, and better than 3,000 reserved seats on sale at $1.25. Sixteen boxes of eight seats each will be handled by Varsity Club members.

G.U. Prep Five Wins 2d Straight Game

Georgetown Prep's fast-traveling basketball team won its second game of the season yesterday, defeating Rockville (Md.) High School, 20 to 10, at Garrett Park.

Fuzzy Fahrendorf and Tom Winsett led the attack with three baskets each, while Nadler chipped in a brace of 2-pointers. Capt. Paul Kelley played his usual effective floor game, as did Devine and Paradis.

renewal of Cincinnati's application for seven night games in 1938. The American League previously had turned down Cleveland's application for night dates.

The "ivory" trade market, one of the dullest in years, hit a new low. Vice President James A. Mulvey, of Brooklyn, departed for the East, putting a fresh damper on the now faint report that the Dodger pitching star, Van Lingle Mungo, may be traded. Several possible American League trades, involving Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis, fell through as numerous managers packed bags to leave before tomorrow's joint session of the circuits before Commissioner K. M. Landis.

The circuits jointly may discuss the ball question, and while it would be possible for either league to rescind its action of today, this possibility was deemed extremely unlikely.

Westminster Splits In Two Court Games

Westminster split even in a pair of Southwest Church League basketball games last night, losing the opener to Southwest Snappers, 38-26, but taking the nightcap from Fifth Baptist, 34-16.

I. C. C. Five Victor In Govt.-Y Loop

Scoring at a clip that exceeded a point a minute, the Interstate Commerce Commission quint kept pace with the leaders by trouncing National Archives, 51 to 20, in last night's play in the Government-Y Basketball League. Brochtel collected 20 points for the winners.

A. G. O. (War Department) maintained their torrid pace of last week by walloping Bureau of Standards, 55 to 26. State Department, in a slow, roughly played game, managed to eke out a 19 to 16 win over G. A. O. (Post Office Division).

Wheat Declines With Slacking Export Sales

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—At least temporary suppression of the Argentine crop scare forced wheat values downward 1¼ cents a bushel today despite Argentine reports of a wet harvest.

Traders generally were inclined to await official confirmation of recent sensational Argentine crop damage reports and meanwhile North American wheat export business came to a virtual halt. It was doubtful whether today's European purchases of wheat from the United States and Canada amounted to even 250,000 bushels.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ½ to 1 cent under yesterday's finish, December 95¾@95⅞, May 93⅛@93¼, July 86¼@86⅝; corn ⅛@⅜ off, December 54¼, May 57½@57⅝; oats unchanged to ⅛ lower; rye unchanged to ⅜ up, and provisions 2 cents to 7 cents down.

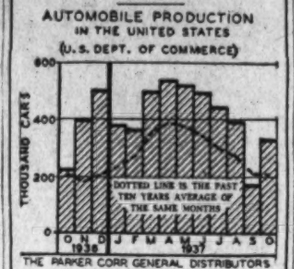
Automobile Output Highest Since 1929



Boston, Dec. 7.—In spite of the recent business recession our automobile factories turned out 46 per cent more units in October than a year ago, and in the first ten months of this year production was the largest for that period since 1929. Of this October production there were 56 per cent more passenger cars turned out than a year ago but 8 per cent fewer trucks.

Cotton Lower In Quiet Trade

New York, Dec. 7 (AP). — Cotton sagged in quiet trading today. March sold off from 7.92 to 7.86 and closed at 7.87 with final prices 3 to 6 points net lower.

The market opened unchanged to 3 points lower under moderate hedge selling and liquidation. During the greater part of the day prices ruled about steady at slight net losses, but toward the close more active hedge selling, credited partly to co-operative account, caused additional declines of a few points.

Farm Income To Show Gain For 5th Year

Not Expected to Reach Government Estimate of 9 Billion.

New York, Dec. 7.—While farm income in the first nine months was sufficently large, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute, to assure a higher annual figure than in 1936 and a gain for the fifth consecutive year, it is now quite unlikely that the annual income this year will reach the $9,000,000,000 forecast by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Even if the quantity of farm products marketed during the last quarter were maintained at as high a level relative to a year ago as in September and even if prices held at the October level, which was sharply lower than in September, the annual 1937 farm income, including estimated benefit payments of $425,000,000, would amount to only $8,798,000,000.

Consequently, the prospect is that farm income this year will not only fall below $9,000,000,000, but that it will be less than $8,798,000,000. It is probable that the downward price trend has not yet been halted and it is very questionable whether the quantity of farm products marketed will hold up at the September rate. With even a $9,000,000,000 farm income foreshadowing a rather sharp business recession, which is now materializing, the present outlook that farm income will not reach the figure is particularly unfavorable.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Are Irregular in Moderate Trade; Government Bonds Soft; Wheat Down.

New York, Dec. 7.—Dullness in security markets was unrelieved. United States bonds receded a little and stocks were irregular. Prices toward the close looked firmer than at the opening, but the losses exceeded the gains on a turnover of less than a million shares. May wheat dropped ⅞ of a cent to 93¼ cents a bushel.

After the poor opening prices had been assimilated, stocks in the morning moved irregularly and virtually the same performance was given in the afternoon. Nothing could be seized upon either to encourage or to discourage further the holders or prospective buyers of securities. Tax sales were still a factor, but a minor one, and are now being offset by some repurchasing by those who took their losses earlier.

Steel Is Firm.

Steel shares were inclned to greater firmness, as were the utilities. Most of the mining stocks improved by at least a fraction. Airplane stocks again were higher and the motor section found more friends. Railroad shares were mixed. Electrical equipments, farm implements and some of the chemicals did better.

A few stocks were affected by dividend announcements. Celanese weakened on the passing of the dividend. Manville declined in spite of an extra dividend declaration. Sears-Roebuck, which probably has another dividend this year yet to come, was easier. Some unusual transactions took placein Budd Manufacturing preferred. Thee were about a dozen sepaate sales of odd lots, mostly, at 45 for 15-day delivery, against a closing price, regular delivery, of 48. In last hour the price was reduced a point on a block of 330 shares, following a sale of 100 shares.

Standard Oil of Kansas made further response to the $5 dividend announcement of yesterday. It moved up 2 points to a new high price. Union Carbide, Union Pacific and Melville Shoe were soft spots. Both classes of Laclede Gas enjoyed their busiest session in a long time. Gains of half a dozen points or so each were scored in those stocks which were the most active of any at the odd lot post.

While Congress kills time over the farm bill and looks fishily at the tide-stopping wages and hours bill (a rather pathetic spectacle with total wage payments and total work hours falling throughout the country), the time has come for some genuinely constructive legislation. It would be difficult to say the exact measure of influence which chocked capital markets are having on business and the influence which the business recession is exerting on the capital markets; but a good capital market is needed if business recovery, supposing it could be set in motion without aid of new investment demand actively employed, is to last.

Regulations Excessive.

Complaints on the score of the excessive regulations of the stock market under the securities and exchange act have been directed in the main toward the tendency of the control to intensify market movements having their origin from natural causes. When the stock market falls too sharply in a period of slack business, the alarm which it creates and the credit which it freezes increase the severity of the industrial recession. In the same way, once even a mild setback in the markets takes place, for no matter what cause, the retreat of the capital market which is without supporting forces is in danger of becoming a rout.

Three years of operation under the banking legislation of 1934 have convinced many careful observers that some serious weaknesses of the old methods of financing new capital issues have not been cured. In some respects they have been increased. The new capital markets are now tied in a hard knot. The shelves have a good-sized supply of unsold securities, with market prices well below the original offering prices, and once it begins to thaw out the old process of too much pushing of poor securities and of too much concentration of demand for good securities will be revived.

Business Views.

If business men are now finding it difficult to secure orders for goods and to move them into consumption they are growing much bolder in giving their views on the causes for the recession in business. Addresses delivered today before the Congress of American Industry are in general agreement on the main points, which also any canvass of business sentiment, among the large as well as the small, will show to be the widespread conviction of American business men.

Granted that inventories in many lines are large, they are not regarded as burdensome under favorable psychological conditions. Certainly the situation is stronger on all counts than it was in 1929. It is difficult for any one to find a convincing reason why business at this stage should continue downward. Whether it grows a good deal worse or soon begins another recovery patently depends upon what is done at Washington. Helpful legislation, and above all a scrapping of plans to take a few more turns on the Government's management vise, quickly could clear the atmosphere and give business confidence. Nothing else stands in the road of recovery but lack of confidence. Business is suffering partly from what it doesn't see as keenly as it fears; the Government is suffering from what it thinks it sees—a conspiracy.

U. S. Sugar Exports Rise 12.6 Per Cent

New York, Dec. 7.—Refined sugar exports by the United States during the first ten months of 1937, January through October, totaled 52,735 long tons, as against 46,817 tons during the similar period last year, an increase of 5,918 tons, or approximately 12.6 per cent, according to Lamborn & Co.

The refined sugar exports during the January-October period this year went to over 40 different countries. The United Kingdom leads this year with 26,324 tons, being followed by Colombia and Panama with 9,464 tons and 2,945 tons respectively.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Leading currencies yesterday declined in terms of the dollar, erasing a considerable part of yesterday's gains.

The pound sterling dipped ¼ of a cent to $5.00. Holland guilders dropped .03 of a cent to 55.88 cents. Foreign exchange circles heard the Dutch control was pegging the guilder to sterling, allowing it to follow the course of the British unit.

French francs were quoted at 3.40⅛ cents, off .00⅛ of a cent. Registered and travel reichsmarks were higher.

In London the dollar closed at 5.00 to the pound, against sterling at the New York overnight of $5.00¼. The dollar closed in Paris at the equivalent of 3.40 cents to the franc compared with the New York overnight of 3.402 cents.

United Air Lines' cargo tonnage is substantially ahead of last year, show figures for the first ten months of this year, when a total of 3,589 tons of mail and express were carried, contrasted with 3,374 in the same period of 1936. This represents an increase of 6½ per cent.

From January 1 to November 1, 1937, United flew 2,626 tons of mail, compared to 2,446 tons in the same period last year, and 963 tons of express, contrasted with 928 tons in the ten-month period of 1936.

McCrory Stores Vote 50 Cents on Common

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Directors of McCrory Stores Corporation today authorized payment of 50 cents a share on common stock, payable December 10 to holders of record November 20.

This is the first disbursement since 1931. The company operates a chain of variety stores in Middle Atlantic, Southern and Middle Western States.

United States Revenue Aided By New Taxes

Latest Imports Account for Over 20 % of 1937 Collections.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Dec. 7.—New taxes imposed by the present Administration accounted for collections of almost $1,000,000,000 in the fiscal year 1937, or more than 20 per cent of all internal revenue, according to the New York Trust Co. in its recent issue of The Index. Manufacturers' excise taxes, the excess profits tax, the undistributed profits tax, and the social security taxes are singled out by the bank review as the most important of these new levies which were not made in 1930 but are now incorporated in the Federal tax structure.

"Internal revenue collections bear most heavily upon those States where manufacturing is the major industry," states the review, "and this tendency has been accentuated by the new taxes imposed in recent years. While this may be rationalized to a great extent on the basis of income received in these manufacturing States, as well as by ease of collection, the fact remains that income in the agricultural States, as represented by farm products for consumption on the farm, may represent a very substantial item which escapes taxation altogether.

"There is little disagreement on the main point that our present tax system is cumbersome and subject to marked inequalities, with serious duplication between the various levies imposed by the Federal Government and those of other governmental units. If the primary purpose of taxation is to raise the revenues necessary for the proper functioning of government, it would appear clear that taxes which serve to restrict industry's opportunity to make further progress defeat their own purposes by raising the costs of production so high that a curtailment of the distributive market is almost inevitable."

Regular and Extra Dividends Voted

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Directors of Johns-Manville Corporation today authorized an extra dividend of $1 a share on common stock, in addition to the usual 75 per cent quarterly disbursement, both dividends payable December 24 to holders of record December 17. An extra dividend of 75 cents a common share was paid September 24. The regular quarterly declaration of $1.75 a share on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred also was voted.

Goodyear Additional.

Akron, O., Dec. 7 (AP).—Directors of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. today declared an "additional" dividend of 50 cents a share on the common stock. Four other dividends of the same amount have been paid this year. The latest is payable December 24 to holders of record December 10.

Standard Oil of Kansas.

Houston, Tex., Dec. 7 (AP).—Directors of Standard Oil Co. of Kansas today declared a dividend of $5 a share on common stock, payable December 20 to holders of record December 17.

Mack Truck.

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Directors of Mack Trucks declared a year-end extra dividend of 25 cents, and the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents on common stock, payable December 17 to holders of record December 24.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Dec. 7 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—A little business was being transacted in Boston today in fine Western-grown wools. Most of the sales were to worsted manufacturers. Graded French combing fine territory wools were bringing 70 to 75 cents scoured basis. Good French combing fine territory wools in original bag were available at 68 to 73 cents scoured basis, although some holders asked around 75 cents. A fair amount of 12-month Texas wools were available in small lots at prices as low as 65 cents scoured basis.

Navy Awards $29,884,850 in Ship Contracts

1,600 Jobs to Be Created in Construction of Four Vessels.

The Navy, following President Roosevelt's instructions to expedite Government expenditures as an aid to business, yesterday awarded contracts totaling $29,884,850 for the construction of four ships.

Awards valued at $20,680,555 for the construction of two auxiliaries—a 9,000-ton destroyer tender and an 8,300-ton destroyer tender—went to the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, of Camden, N. J.

Construction of a 1,500-ton destroyer at the Puget Sound Navy Yard, Bremerton, Wash., and of a second at the Charleston (S. C.) Navy Yard, also was authorized. The estimated cost of the two ships is $9,204,295.

Under the contracts, the auxiliaries are to be completed within three years. Officials estimated 800 or more men would be employed in the construction of the steam-driven tenders, and that nearly as many would be needed in building the destroyers.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, in announcing the awards, said the "extremely low bid" of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation "made it possible to give favorable consideration to the thousands of letters recently received by the President from the school children of Camden County, N. J., petitioning the award of Government work to this firm to prevent the ultimate lay off of thousands of shipyard workers."

The Navy took into consideration the desirability of giving work to private concerns so their equipment would be available for emergency work in wartime, he declared, after noting that both the $80,000,000 battleships were to be built in Government yards.

The awards were made on an adjusted price basis, permitting allowances for unexpected increases in labor and material costs, but Edison said the margin was so small that the company risked severe loss "if it doesn't get the proper co-operation from its workers."

When construction is begun on the four ships the Navy will have 74 vessels under way, including 6 commissioned in advance of completion. In addition, work is expected to be started next year on the battleship Washington at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

B. & O. Veteran Dies.

Baltimore, Dec. 7 (AP).—Joseph J. O'Neill, 71, veteran retired conductor who worked for the Baltimore & Ohio 54 years before his retirement in 1935, died today at his home here. His widow and a daughter survive.

HOW TO WIN

1. Read the ads in this Gift Guide carefully. In the two open spaces (top part) of the illustrated cartoon figures above write, type, or print what you think the little figure and Santa are saying to each other.

2. The conversation must contain the name of an advertiser whose ad appears here, and something about any gift that he advertises. Only ads in this Gift Guide and the names of the advertisers are considered.

3. Yes, it is necessary to clip out the cartoon illustration to fill in the words you wish to write in the two open spaces (balloons).

4. Daily prize of $2 for the BEST conversation (do not color or decorate). The cleverness and originality in the way you word the conversation is what counts.

5. The first daily prize is a gift order on advertisers herein (your own selection), and 3 pairs of theater tickets to the next three winners. Prizes will be awarded on the third day after printing of each cartoon picture. For the picture that appears today, your answer must be in by 6 p. m. tomorrow. The winners' names will be published here on the third day.

6. You can submit as many entries as you wish, but each must be written in the space of a separate cartoon picture. Send same to Judges of Christmas "Gift Guide," care of The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

7. Here are some sample conversations for above cartoon:

Santa: Son, I couldn't read your letter to Santa because your writing wasn't clear.

Dummy: It would have been if Dad had gotten me one of those CORONA typewriters from Standard Typewriter Co.

Sunday, December 5th, Winners:

1st Prize: $2 Gift Certificate—
Edith McKelvey, 1740 Euclid St. N.W.

2nd, 3rd, 4th Prizes: Theater Tickets—
Ethel B. Moler, 1411 Monroe St. N.E.
Alice C. Healy, 514 10th St. N.W.
Marion Carliss, 4000 Cathedral Ave. N.W.

Your merchandise certificate or theatre tickets may be obtained at the counter in the lobby of The Post upon proper identification.

Official Outlines Security Board's Protection of Idle

New York, Dec. 7 (AP).—Unemployed workers will be protected against the threat of withholding compensation law benefits "as a club to force them to accept employment conditions clearly inimical to their interest and welfare," it was stated today by Collis Stocking, an official of the Federal Social Security Board, to the Society for the Advancement of Management.

Explaining provisions of the new law, under which 22 States will begin paying benefits January 3 to unemployed workers previously employed in insured industry, Stocking said an unemployed person might not be penalized for refusing to accept employment under the following conditions:

1. If the position offered is vacant due directly to a strike, lockout or other labor disputes.

2. If the wages, hours or other conditions offered are substantially less favorable than those prevailing for similar work in the locality.

3. If, as a condition of being employed, the individual would be required to join a company union or to resign from or refrain from joining any bona fide labor organization.

Bob Burns Says—

I read an article the other day that said that the present generation is amusement mad and that the search for constant entertainment is wrecking the foundations of American home life. That sounds pretty scary, but I don't believe there's nothin' much to worry about. In most cases you'll find that either the husband or the wife are interested 'nuf in home life to act as a balance for the other one.

I had an uncle that married a flighty woman and the other evening, after the supper dishes had been put away, he turned to her and says, "What are you going to do this evening?" She said, "Well, as soon as I finish my book, I'll write a couple of letters—then I'll listen to the radio for a while—and so on."

My uncle says "Well, as soon as you get to that 'so on,' don't forget them buttons on my shirt."

Resume of Winnie Winkle . . .

Winnie Winkle has been married to Will Wright, young engineer. Will becomes innocently involved in the disappearance of some of his company's funds and lands in jail. Then Winnie meets one of her former bosses, Ben Baker, who loves her. He learns of her plight and offers her a job again which she accepts. Will is released from jail. When Winnie tells Will that Ben Baker is the benefactor, he becomes suspicious and jealous.

Strolling in the park one day, he overhears a conversation between Ben and Winnie and learns that his jealously has been foolish and that Winnie and Ben really want to help him.

Turkey Denounces Pact Of Amity With Syria

Ankara, Turkey, Dec. 7 (AP).—Turkey denounced her treaty of friendship and non-aggression with Syria today in a note to the French government, which administers Syria under League of Nations mandate.

The Turkish view apparently was that the attitude of French authorities in Syria had been inimical to Turko-Syrian amity.

A formal announcement said French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos is expected here in January to discuss Turko-French problems.
